EXECUTOR'S NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the estate of Catherine Anderson, deceased.

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Chapter 121 of the Statutes of Ontario, 1914, Section 56 and Amending Acts, that all persons having any claims or demands against the estate of Catherine Anderson, late of the village of Newburgh, in the County of Lennox and Addington, widow, deceased, who died on or about the 27th day of October, A. D. 1914, are required to deliver or send by post prepaid to HERRINGTON, WARNER & GRANGE, Napanee, Ontario, solicitors for Robert Anderson, executor of the last will and testament of the said Catherine Anderson, deceased, on or before the 10th day of December A. D. 1914, their christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, with full particulars of their claims or demands duly verified, and the nature of the security (if any) held by them.

And further take notice that after the said 10th day of December, A. D. 1914, the said executor may proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims or demands of which he shall then have received notice, and shall not be responsible for the said assets, or any part thereof so distributed, to any person or persons of whose claims or demands he shall not have received notice at the time of the distribution thereof.

RUSSIANS STILL HAMMERING AT ENTRAPPED ENEMY

London, Dec. 2.—The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs:

For the third time the Czar left this morning for the front. The arrival of his Majesty may be the occasion of the declaration of the good news for which the nation has been waiting. The fact that the Emperor has decided to be present with his troops indicates the certainty of the completion of the strategy of the Grand Duke Nicholas and his plans for the destruction of the common foe of humanity and the assurance of its success.

REPEL EVERY ATTACK.

The German attack in enormous strength upon the Russian left has thus failed, and the Russian centre still is occupied in hammering the surrounded corps into surrender by heavy cannonading which has already continued for a couple of days. On the Russian right success has been scored in the attack directed northwards from Lowicz, in the neighborhood of which, but from the west, the Germans developed a strong attack on Monday in concert with the outflanking movement carried out fifty miles farther south. As already described, the German front here ran northeast to southwest astride the Bzura River. The main efforts were made in a corner formed by the confluence of the Morga and the Bzura at Bielawy, where the hilly ground provides an admirable commanding position for artillery over the plain below. Bielawy is twelve miles west of Lowicz on the high road running through Piotek to Lenczya. The successes of the Russians on the north or right wing are not yet so marked as on the left wing, but the strategic position on both flanks is admirable.

BATTLE HAS BEGUN.

On the Vistula near Plock the Russians have not been content with the capture of four barges, but have now captured five steamboats and one more barge entirely laden with rifle ammunition. The loss of five steamers engaged in towing heavy barges against the strong current of the Vistula has paralyzed the German arrangements for the supply of ammunition, of which they have been so lavish, especially their artillery. On to-day's fighting depends the issue whether the German invaders will once more get away or find themselves entrapped, with the alternative of remaining in Russia dead or as prisoners, or else escaping home only as broken fugitives. The activity of the Russians at Plock, on the right bank of the Vistula, is significant for the Germans originally planned to march along both banks of the Vistula, and indeed reached Plock on the Dear Mrs. Harshaw—We beg to acknowledge receipt of the cases of clothing, which you have so generously forwarded to our relief work. Please accept our heartiest thanks and expressions of gratitude to each donor to this splendid gift of their kind assistance in relieving afflicted Belgians.

Yours very truly,

HECTOR PRUD'HOMME,
Hon. Treas.

Many kind friends are continuing to send in very generous donations to the Belgians. Among them are particularly interesting and touching. A mother sends her baby's clothing with a heart-wrench, but willingly! These poor afflicted little ones, together demonstrate the generosity and kindly feeling of a little son of the country.

A LITTLE BOY'S GIFT.

J. Horace Empey, of Switzerville, little boy of six years old, has sent in a box containing a very nice dressed doll, called "Canada," various toys and fancy articles, and some scrap books, which he has presumptuously made himself for little Belgian children, writing cards, sending his little friends in devastated Belgium, his best Christmas wishes.

Occupation of Belgrave After Long Seige

London, Dec. 2, 10.02 p.m.—Belgrade, which until the outbreak of the war, was the capital of Serbia, was to-day occupied by Austrian troops, the Servians having previously evacuated the city. Thus, on the 66th anniversary of the reign of Emperor Francis Joseph, who again is reported seriously ill, and four months after the outbreak of the war his generals report one of the most important successes they have obtained. Belgrave was frequently under bombardment early in the war, and but for the general European war which compelled Austria to send her troops against Russia, must have fallen an easy prey to Serbia's big neighbor.

PRINCESS MARY'S FUND FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS TO SOLDIERS

LETTERS FROM CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS

Nov. 19th, 1914.
Salisbury Plain,

Dear Mr. Pollard—I received three copies of the Nananee Express Monday and another one last night. I have read the first three and passed them on to Doug. Jemmett and Herb Baker who are in the same company with me. You can't imagine what an interest we take in reading the local news. It is only a little over three months since we left the town but it seems like ages, so much have we gone through since then. We see by your paper that the town and county are doing everything they can for the benefit of the distressed and needy in the war zone. The people over here appreciate it fully and every day there is a column in the English papers about the help which Canada has given to the Empire in every way. We expect to be in camp here for a month before we cross over to France, but of course no one knows when Kitchener will move us, but we are hoping it will be soon as the routine gets monotonous. All the Nananee boys are well and like it fine so far as I know, but of course we are pretty well separated.

The Rev. Capt. McGreer from Nananee is our chaplain and he is a splendid head. Well there is really no news so hoping to get the next issue of the Nananee Express soon, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
P. U. LAIDLEY.

MR. E. POLLARD.

Dear Sir—I am more than thankful for the kind way you have used me in the reading line. It is certainly a treat to get The Nananee Express in England. Well, this is some place here. We are just 165 miles from the firing line, at least, that is what they say here.

Some place here for rain; it rained for two weeks steady—a regular down pour. It floods the Downs here when it rains. It rained so hard one night that some of us laid in three inches of water.

We all had to buy rubber boots. They cost 22 shillings. They soak us for everything. The three hundred men from Montreal reached the Downs on Monday, Nov. 17th, 1914.

We, (the Canadians) get a great name here. There are about a million or more men on the Downs: Lord Kitchener's army, Australia, New Zealand, and all are here. Some of the men have had to go to the hospital on account of rheumatism. The mud is terribly deep. We are having fine weather now. I will write you a story of the trip across the ocean, camp and all, after a while. I was more than glad to see the names of those men who volunteered for service.

YELLOW BOOK ISSUE

French Government Publish
Documents Bearing on War

Kaiser Wilhelm, Who Up to 1914 Had Posed as a Champion of Peace, Told King of Belgium That He Had Finally Come to Share the Ideas of Military Advisers — Was Jealous of Crown Prince.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The French Ministry of Foreign Affairs yesterday made public a Yellow Book bearing on the causes of the present war. The French volume is much more complete than the publications of this nature given out up to the present time by other Governments. The French report comprises no fewer than 600 hundred and sixty documents.

"It was first in the spring of 1911," says the yellow book, "that we noted this colossal and expensive military effort which alone can explain the desire to impose the Germanic superiority and hegemony of the necessity of an offensive war against France; prepare uprisings in Russia and in North Africa; provide for, in case of hostilities, the immediate absorption of Belgium and Holland."

"We declare that Emperor William, who up to that time had posed as a champion of peace, admitted the course of a conversation with the King of Belgium that he had finally come to share the ideas of his military advisers. He had placed himself among the partisans of a war which he thought would not be long delayed, and the overpowering success which seemed to him certain. Public opinion, in its turn, permitted itself to be won over by the passion of the military party, and came to consider the affair of Agadir as a defeat for Germany. It regarded the existence of a strong France as a danger to Germany, and the breaking out of a European war as the only remedy for all difficulties and uncertainties."

From a perusal of the six old chapters of the yellow book there to be deduced and supported by evidence the fact that the combination between Austria and Germany had decided upon war, and that on successive occasions this combination endeavored to precipitate war by violent proceedings, the purpose of which was to prevent or to insist the failure of all efforts at conciliation.

The most interesting human document in the yellow book is a letter written by M. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador at Berlin, to the Foreign Minister Pichon, in November 1913, warning the Foreign Office of German hostility to France was increasing and that the Kaiser had ceased to be a partisan of peace. The Ambassador added:

"The King of the Belgians had the same impression after a conversation with the Emperor in the presence of Von Moltke. The reason is, perhaps, that the Kaiser is jealous of the growing popularity of the Crown Prince who is flattering pan-Germanic passions."

STEAMER SUSPECTED.

Norwegian Craft Is Brought Captive Into Halifax.

HALIFAX, Dec. 1.—In charge of a prize crew from one of the British cruisers on duty in the Atlantic, the Norwegian steamer Sandefjord was brought into Halifax harbor yesterday. There is a suspicion that the steamer has contraband of war on board. She was bound from New York for Copenhagen, when held up by the cruiser, a prize crew placed aboard and ordered to Halifax.

The cargo will be discharged and searched here. She registers 6,026 tons, was chartered by the Gans Steamship Co. and has a big general cargo. It is supposed that she has silk for airships among her cargo. The steamer will be docked to-day.

Wireless Tower Found.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—A tall tower which they believed to be part of a wireless plant set up by one of the belligerents was sighted on Toro Cay, an isolated spot in the Caribbean Sea, by officers of the steamer San Jose, they reported upon the arrival of their vessel yesterday. Capt. McKinnon of the steamer said the structure, which appeared to be of steel frames, was a new one.

Whilst we were mounting to get away, His Serene Highness and Col. Ferguson, who accompanied him, were last to leave. In another instance, the prince was standing near a farm house when a shell burst within about ten yards of him. He merely looked round and took in the situation with remarkable coolness, exhibiting not the slightest fear."

BUKOWINA OCCUPIED.

Austrian Crown Land in Full Possession of Russians.

ROME, Dec. 1.—A despatch to The Messenger from Bucharest says that the Russians have occupied the whole of the crown land of Bukowina, capturing enormous quantities of ammunition, arms and provisions.

After the capture of Czernowitz, following the siege and bombardment of the capital of the Austrian crown land, the Russian army spread over the entire area, clear to the borders of Roumania.

The Austrian Catholic population of Bukowina has fled across the border into Hungary. The frontier is said to be entirely unguarded by the Austrians and to be open for an advance of the Russians.

Bombardment Protested.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 1.—(Via London).—The Tijds states that the Chamber of Commerce of Armentieres has sent to the American consul at Dunkirk, with a request that he forward to Washington, a protest against the bombardment by the Germans of Armentieres. The protest declares that several women and children have been killed, that houses have been set on fire, and that the city is not being used for military purposes by the allies, not a single soldier being there.

Straight Party Fight.

WINCHESTER SPRINGS, Ont., Dec. 1.—There will be a straight party fight to succeed the late Sir James Whitney as representative in the Legislature from Dundas County. John Campbell, Liberal, of Ormond, was nominated by the Liberals, and Irwin Hilliard of Morrisburg by the Conservatives, at yesterday's nomination proceedings. The polling will take place on Monday, Dec. 7 next.

An Unconventional Duke.

Kew Parish church had among former worshippers the first Duke of Cambridge, a strong but unconventional churchman, who made audible comments while the service was in progress. To the exhortation, "Let us pray," he would reply, "By all means," and during a dry summer he added to the "Amen" after the prayer for rain. "But we sha'n't get it till the wind changes." On hearing the words, "For we brought nothing into the world, neither may we carry anything out," he would ejaculate, "True, true; too many calls upon us for that."

KAISER SHIFTS FORCES

He May Be Planning New Assault or Making a Retreat.

Indian Troops Are Said To Have Come Upon Deserted Trenches In Belgium and German Defence Guns Are Reported To Be Taking Up a Position From Ostend to Courtrai.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Behind their battle front in Belgium the Germans are said to be engaged in shifting their forces, but whether these movements presage another onslaught or whether the Kaiser has ordered a retirement, has not been ascertained, by the aeroplane scouts of the allies.

From Germany comes an official report to the effect that new attacks may be expected against the allies in the near future.

Despatches from northern France say that the bombardments by the Germans in that region have slackened, and that it is believed that many of the heavy guns have been removed to a new defence line, probably along the line of Ostend, Roulers and Courtrai.

Another indication that the Germans are making preparations to fall back to positions which they have had time to prepare is seen in the fact that in a number of cases the Indian troops with the allies have advanced and found the front rank trenches of the Germans unoccupied and nearly filled with water.

The following official communication was issued last evening in Paris: "There is nothing of importance to report, beyond some attacks from the enemy to the north of Arras, which were without result."

The official communique, given out yesterday afternoon is as follows:

"In Belgium the enemy is remaining on defensive. The artillery fire has been feeble and we have made progress at certain points. In the vicinity of Fay, we hold securely the positions we occupied Nov. 28."

"In the region of Soissons there has been an intermittent artillery fire directed against the town."

"In the Argonne, several attacks on the town of Bagatelle were repulsed by our troops."

"There has been a heavy fog on the heights of the Meuse."

"In the Woëvre district the enemy bombarded the forest of Apremont, but without result."

"There is nothing to report in the Vosges."

The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent in France sends the following despatch:—

The armies that Germany now has in France to oppose the French and British troops are six in number.

The first is under command of Gen. von Kluck, who is still making vain endeavors to break through the allies' line from a point southeast of Amiens to Soissons. The second, which was under command of Gen. von Buelow, is trying to force a passage in Somme and to the north of Arras. The third, under Gen. von Einam, is held in reserve. The fourth, under command of the Duke of Württemberg, is operating between Ostend and Armentières. We know what it lost in its vain and furious attacks along the Yser and the Lys, when it tried to break through the French, British and Belgian lines, and what remains of it now is partly immobilized in the midst of the canals, ditches and overflowing rivers.

Fall of City May Be Expected at Any Moment, Say Despatches.

Reports From Great Battle In Poland Are Conflicting and Final Issue Has Not Been Reached—Germans Fighting Desperately to Extricate Themselves From Disastrous Defeat.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The fall of Cracow may be expected at any time, according to advices received here from Petrograd. Since Saturday the Russians have been shelling the outer fortifications and the fire of their howitzers has reached the citadel of the city. One suburb is already burning, and the entire city has been devastated.

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters at Petrograd last night:—

"Stubborn engagements continue in the direction of Lowicz. An attempt by the Germans to advance in the region of Rzeszow has been repulsed with great losses to the Germans."

"On the rest of the front along the left bank of the Vistula an artillery engagement took place on Nov. 29."

"The Russian troops, after a fight lasting ten days, captured on Nov. 28 the Austrian positions which protected the passes in the Carpathians, extending about 33 miles from Kone-

The fourth, under command of the Duke of Wurttemberg, is operating between Ostend and Armentieres. We know what it lost in its vain and furious attacks along the Yser and the Lys, when it tried to break through the French, British and Belgian lines, and what remains of it now is partly immobilized in the midst of the canals, ditches and overflowing rivers.

The fifth army, which extends from St. Emenhould to Metz, with which fortress it co-operates, suffered enormous losses in its attempts to storm the almost impregnable heights of the Meuse while undertaking what is called the "siege of Verdun." The fact of the matter is that Verdun is so far from being besieged that its big fortress guns have not yet been brought into action since the beginning of the war, and during the past few weeks the French line of battle has been forwarded in that region, so that the French field guns are now bombarding the German positions within sixteen kilometres of the fortifications of Metz. It is Metz, therefore, which seems more likely to be threatened before long than is Verdun.

The sixth German army, under command of the Crown Prince of Bavaria, is drawn between Armentieres and Arras, and it has made no greater progress than any of the other five.

Many C. P. R. Changes.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.—C. P. R. changes following Mr. Bury's promotion as general manager are: Grant Hall, Winnipeg, succeeds Mr. Bury as vice-president and general manager of western lines; D. O. Coleman of Calgary succeeds Mr. Hall as assistant general manager; H. E. Stevens' successor has not been decided upon. He may be Edward Duval of Saskatoon.

Mysterious Mine In Sea Lane.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A mine with five triggers extending from it is afloat six miles west of Fire Island Light, according to Capt. Davies of the steamer Etonian, in yesterday from London. Capt. Davies said that he passed the mine about 10 o'clock yesterday morning, while his ship was bound in.

The spot, where the mine is said to be a drift lies in the pathway traveled by all trans-Atlantic vessels leaving and entering New York harbor.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 1.—(Via London.)—The Scandinavian press greatly favors the proposal to donate the Nobel Prize to the Belgian refugees. The newspapers say that this would be in accordance with the ideas of Dr. Alfred B. Nobel, and that the money would thus be devoted to a thoroughly neutral object.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional treatment. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters at Petrograd last night:—

"Stubborn engagements continue in the direction of Lowicz. An attempt by the Germans to advance in the region of Rzeszow has been repulsed with great losses to the Germans.

"On the rest of the front along the left bank of the Vistula an artillery engagement took place on Nov. 29.

"The Russian troops, after a fight lasting ten days, captured on Nov. 28 the Austrian positions which protected the passes in the Carpathians, extending about 33 miles from Koneczna, which is situated north of Bartfeld, as far as Sczuko, situated south of Mezo Laborcz. The Russians in this district captured cannon, machine guns and many prisoners.

"During the first half of November we captured in all 50,000 Austro-Hungarian soldiers and 600 officers.

"At Plock, Poland, the Russian troops seized four ships laden with machine guns and munitions.

"In East Prussia, minor engagements continue.

"No Turkish warship has been seen in the Black Sea since Nov. 21."

Reference in London to the Russian success in Poland has been somewhat toned down since the cautionary report of Grand Duke Nicholas. Military critics are convinced, however, that the Germans have suffered a check which only the most strenuous efforts of their commanders can save from degenerating into defeat.

From Poland the reports as to the situation between the German and the Russian armies are conflicting. Both Berlin and Petrograd, however, agree that the final issue has not yet been reached. Petrograd reports that the Germans are energetically resisting the Russian advance in the vicinity of Strykow, and the situation is said to be favorable for the Russians.

The Berlin claim is that the Russian offensive movement has been effectually checked, but the final outcome is yet to be disclosed.

The violent battle in Poland is still raging in the region of Strykow and Lodz, says a despatch to The Matin from its Petrograd correspondent.

The Russian pressure is steadily tightening about the three German army corps which were enveloped between Strykow and Brzeziny, and fresh forces have been despatched to the front to meet the Germans' reinforcements, which are advancing from the vicinity of Lenszyca.

The Germans have hastily sent a force of 30,000 men to strengthen the garrison at Breslau, in evident anticipation of a Russian success at Cracow.

It is now definitely known here that at least two army corps have been recalled from Belgium and France to the eastern arena of war.

The Austrian army west of Cracow and Przemyk has been dismembered.

INDIANS SURROUNDED.

Slayers of Pembroke Turnkey Are Cornered In Bush.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Dec. 1.—Peter White Duck and Anthony Jocko, the two Indians who murdered Turnkey Robert Coxford and seriously wounded Jailer Wm. Brown here Sunday night, have been rounded up by posses near Golden Lake, the Indian reserve, and their capture is hourly expected. Sheriff Morris received word last night from W. H. Williams and Magistrate J. Stewart, the leaders of the armed posses which left Pembroke Sunday night, that the desperadoes had been surrounded in a small bush.

A strict guard is being kept on the wooded area, and the Indians will likely be taken in the morning.

WOES OF THE POOR RICH.

How the Wife of One Wealthy Man Got Her Spending Money.

In the American Magazine, in a story by Rebecca Hooper Eastman, is a satire on the poor rich, in which the wife of a wealthy man tells as follows how she gets hold of her spending money:

"Kitty, dear, I can't bear that you should misjudge me, and so I am going to tell you what not a soul in this world knows. I have absolutely no money and no way of getting any. My husband doesn't think it is necessary for me to have money when I can charge things. I owe you a dollar. You think I have forgotten, but I have not. And I am going to pay you—when I can.

"I want to tell you that I have just discovered a way to make money. You see, I have borrowed so many small sums for tips and car fares that I am quite in debt.

"We have one of the finest cooks in New York, as you know, and I order him to make cakes. He thinks they are for a bazaar. In reality I sell these cakes at a certain woman's exchange for $1 a loaf, cash, Kitty. I leave my car at a nearby hotel, walk through the hotel to the exchange on the next street, wear a plain suit and a thick veil, which I put on in the hotel dressing room. Nobody knows."

WHAT CAUSES CRYSTALS?

An Obscure Process That Plays a Large Part in Nature.

In answer to the question, "Will a sudden jar ever cause crystals to appear in a supersaturated solution, or can this be produced only by the introduction of one of the crystals?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Supersaturation and crystal formation are obscure phenomena. Let water dissolve salts until it is supersaturated when perfectly still; then let the containing vessel be suddenly moved, tapped or disturbed; then crystals of the dissolved substances will instantly form. Pure water, distilled, may be put into a closed container and a thermometer placed below the surface.

"Keep the whole very still and the water may be cooled a number of degrees below the freezing—that is, crystallizing—point without crystallizing. Suddenly strike the vessel and the liquid will crystallize. Many solutions of superdensity will thus behave.

FREEDOM FOR POLAND

CZAR'S PROMISE IS ONE OF THE BIG EVENTS OF THE WAR.

Millions of People Are Concerned In an Issue Which May Alter the Map of Europe — Fragments of Great Nation Are Divided Between Russia, Germany and Austria—Would Strengthen Slavs.

Not even the issue of that great battle on the plains of Belgium, where the artillery of five nations is awakening echoes as portentous as those of Waterloo, should wholly avail to distract the attention of the world from the momentous rescript of the Czar of Russia which promises to the Poles the realization of most if not all of the dreams and the aspirations which they have treasured for nearly a century and a half with a patriotism and a fidelity surpassing even that which has animated the French as they looked across an arbitrary frontier to the mournful prospect of their lost provinces.

Alone of the races the Poles, divided between three great powers, the subjects of Prussia, Russia and Austria, have failed to achieve even a partial risorgimento, although of all races they have most ardently and loyally preserved the memory of former solidarity and cherished the dream of future reintegration. To them now the Czar, with all the solemnity and publicity of an irrefragable oath, has promised the right to speak their language, pursue the natural evolution of their own race, if, in this great European crisis they give to him and his nation the loyalty which may assure him victory.

And this sacred promise does not apply merely to the 12,000,000 people who live in that restricted district, no larger than Lower Ontario which bears the name of Russian Poland and contains the ancient capital of Warsaw. Reading the rescript there is no mistaking the fact that it is equally instinct with hope for the 5,000,000 Poles now subjects of a Hapsburg and the 3,000,000 Poles who owe reluctant submission to a Hohenzollern. In a word, the rescript of the Czar points inevitably toward new and momentous changes in the map of Europe if victory shall come to the cause he has championed in this great conflict.

If Poland is to be re-established, why not Bohemia with its millions of Slavs, not less than 8,000,000, including the Slovaks on the marches of Hungary, west of the Carpathians?

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Their Coast Line Is Longer Than That of the United States.

"It is not generally known perhaps that the coast line of the Philippine Islands is longer than that of the United States," said a man who has spent more than fifteen years in that country. "The Philippines are numerous islands," he continued. "It would take one many months to tour all of the islands. Of course the climate varies, but in most parts it is delightful. The average temperature is lower than in many parts of the United States, and the humidity is not nearly so great. Records of temperature in the Philippines have been kept since 1865, and in that time the maximum recorded was 103 degrees. The mean temperature is from 70 to 80 degrees.

"If the humidity were great there are times when it would be almost unbearable, but ordinarily I would rather live in the Philippines than in most sections of this country. It is fortunate that in the month of greatest humidity, September, the temperature falls lower than at any other time of the year, which makes it possible to endure the conditions.

"I have frequently been asked if there is much drinking among the Filipinos. There is comparatively very little. The Filipinos have discovered, even if some of our own countrymen have not, that alcoholic drinks and the tropics do not mix. It is seldom you see a Filipino intoxicated. There are native brewed drinks in different islands, but the people do not overindulge."

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

More Liable to Generate in Powdered Than in Solid Substances.

The scientific phrase for combustion is oxidation, or the combining of some substance with the oxygen of the air. Some substances have greater affinity for oxygen than others, and whenever the combustion reaches a certain point of rapidity fire results.

Anything that increases the facility of combination with oxygen increases the danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion, and for that reason a substance is more dangerous when pulverized than when solid, because the separated particles of matter are brought more directly in contact with the oxygen of the air. There is no danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion in a mass of unground wheat, but mills have been destroyed by explosions of flour dust.

Fixed oils absorb oxygen and give out carbon and hydrogen, causing a rise of temperature that may reach the burning point, as has often occurred in heaps of rags, tow, sawdust and similar bodies soaked with oil, paint, varnish, turpentine and sometimes grease. Bituminous coal is liable to spontaneous combustion when moistened with water, and the coal dust in mines is a common cause of explosions. Moisture aids spontaneous combustion in piles of damp hay or freshly mown grass, and barns have been burned from that cause.

"Keep the whole very still and the water may be cooled a number of degrees below the freezing—that is, crystallizing—point without crystallizing. Suddenly strike the vessel and the liquid will crystallize. Many solutions of superdensity will thus behave.

"This little understood process underlying the fascinating mathematical science of crystal forming plays a highly important part in nature in the building of solids, of crystalline rocks and general structure of our house—the earth."

End Came Quickly.

The experiences of local jewelers with prospective bridegrooms have been many and varied. Some wish to buy on the installment plan, some wish to take a half dozen sizes to be sure of a fit and some bring "beautiful verses" to see whether they can be engraved in the ring.

One jeweler in recounting his experiences said a young man came into his store and when asked whether he wished anything engraved inside the ring became confused, fumbled a bit in his pockets and finally produced a paper on which was scrawled, "The love that never endeth," which the jeweler said was just the proper sentiment.

A month later the young man returned and told the whole history of his marital life in five words, "Can't you cut that out?" pointing to the engraved sentence.

Glacier National Park.

Glacier National park is in northern Montana and is bounded on the north by the Canadian line, on the east by the Blackfoot Indian reservation and on the south and west by Flathead river. It has an area of about 915,000 acres and derives its name from many glaciers, which are scattered throughout its area. There are about eighty glaciers, between five square miles and a few acres in area. The park is a rugged mountainous region and contains over 250 lakes, which are surrounded by steep and beautifully wooded mountains or precipitous rock walls. The methods of transportation in the park are by automobile, horse stage, launches on the lakes and saddle and pack horses.

land contains the ancient capital of Warsaw. Reading the rescript there is no mistaking the fact that it is equally instinct with hope for the 5,000,000 Poles now subjects of a Hapsburg and the 3,000,000 Poles who owe reluctant submission to a Hohenzollern. In a word, the rescript of the Czar points inevitably toward new and momentous changes in the map of Europe if victory shall come to the cause he has championed in this great conflict.

If Poland is to be re-established, why not Bohemia with its millions of Slavs, not less than 8,000,000, including the Slovaks on the marches of Hungary, west of the Carpathians? Ever since the "Defenestration of Prague," even since the battle of the White Hill that sent the Winter King into exile, Bohemia has been subject to the Germans, and millions of Czechs have maintained a desperate battle for racial independence. Today Europe is fighting because the Czar chose to extend to the little Slav brother on the Danube the protection of his great empire. To-day the Serbs of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Croats of Dalmatia and Croatia, the Slovenes of Carniola, Carinthia and the Coast Lands, all the southern Slavs from the Alps to the Balkans are included in the great Pan-Slavon renaissance which has followed the victories of the Slavs of Bulgaria and Serbia in the Balkans.

Not as an appeal to a fraction of his own people, not as a pledge to bind the halting loyalty of some millions of subjects on a threatened frontier, is the Czar's rescript to be accepted. It has a far wider meaning not mistaken either in Berlin or Vienna, or indeed in London.

Poland restored, even with its frontiers of language alone, would give Europe a State of nearly 25,000,000 inhabitants. It would take from Germany at least three provinces and from Austria half its population, if to the freeing of the Poles there was added the logical work of liberating all Slavs, Austria would disappear from the map of Europe. There would appear at least three Slav States in its place: Poland, Bohemia and Serbo-Croatia. To Slavdom there would be added not less than 30,000,000 of Slavs, bound by ties of race, religion and common hatred of the German.

Such in its wider aspect is the meaning of the rescript of the Czar. In it is to be found much warrant for the German assertion that at bottom the present war is a struggle between Slav and Teuton.

Bringing It to a Climax.

"I know what's passing in your mind," suddenly said the maiden as the habitually silent caller stared at her. "I know, too, why you are calling here night after night, appropriating my time to yourself and keeping other nice young men away. You want me to marry you, don't you?"

"I—I do!" gasped the young man. "I thought so. Very well! I will."

commences on that day. When the bridegroom sends to the house of the bride the canopy under which she walks in state on the following Thursday to his home. Along with this, he is rich, he sends her a sack full of leaves of the henna plant, so much in use among the Arab women for toilet purposes; also two or three lambs, much oil and grain—in fact, everything necessary for the marriage feast for the women, which takes place in the bride's house. Musicians playing the tomtom and the zumm (pipes) accompany the gifts.

Then a quaint ceremony takes place. The bride, covered with a rich silk ravan, and held by two women attendants, who grasp her firmly on either side of the waist, advances still and solemnly, preceded by a third, who walks backward, holding a looking glass in front of the bride's face, that she must gaze into it as she walks. When she reaches the sack of henna still with the utmost solemnity she kneels down upon it seven times in succession to bring good fortune to her future home. This is a very ancient custom never omitted on the Monday.

On Tuesday, the henna leaves having been crushed by the women, a paste is put on the head of the bride and a little on her hands. Then she remains seated while her women and girl friends gather round her. Each in turn places her hand on the bride's head, extolling her many virtues, saying how charitable she has been, how generous, that she has given oil, bread and clothes to the poor, etc. Whether true or not is of the least importance.

On Wednesday evening her hands are covered with henna, the whole of the palms and the back of the hands far as the knuckles, so that they look almost black. The feet are treated the same way, the whole of the soles and the rest of the foot in the shape of a shoe.

Thursday is the great day. No more after these ceremonies, after all so many preparations and much feasting with her friends, the actual marriage day arrives. In the morning the bride is perfumed with rich, strange oriental scents. At 6 o'clock in the evening she is taken in procession under a canopy to the house of the bridegroom.

Before entering the room where she will be attired for the marriage, she stops outside the door to throw a break an egg against the top of the lintel. As soon as she gets inside the room she breaks a jar of water, breaks old customs, to bring good luck. The women dress her in fine silk cloth with many gold ornaments and a silk barracan, all provided by the bridegroom. As a matter of fact, one or two or three of the rich gold bracelets and so on are given, the rest being hired by the bridegroom for the occasion.

The bride is then left seated in a room covered with a great piece of silk or cloth all over her and hid entirely from view. By this time her women and girl friends have arrived and are feasting and joking in one of the rooms. Now the bridegroom, who in the meantime has been to prayer in the mosque, comes to his house, accompanied by all friends, singing and making merry. They all go into a separate room.

All these customs are in vogue also among the Bedouin Arabs, but they have others. For instance, the Bedouin bridegroom for seven days after the wedding enjoys himself, wandering through the gardens of the oasis, doing no work, always accompanied by a group of his friends. But on the seventh day he must keep a sharp look out, for on that day his friends will try suddenly to play a trick on him. If he escapes them well and good. Then he can run to his house and be safe. If not, they snatch his clothes from him and beat him, which seems a poor return for the feasting and entertainment. But it is the custom. These people will not omit the slightest ceremony handed down to them by their forefathers. — "The New Tripoli, and What I Saw in the Hinterland," by Ethel Braun.

BATHING IN JAPAN.

Natives Wash Themselves Clean Before Getting Into the Tub.

Partial accounts of the luxury of a Japanese bath lead us to believe that we have something yet to learn about what is regarded by many in this country as a necessity and by more as a supererogation—in Japan the bath is not only a necessity, but a delightful recreation.

The Japanese have a way of their own of taking a bath. They have a system that in some respects resembles that enforced at swimming pools in this country. You must first wash the body thoroughly, and then you enter the tub, the water of which is heated by an individual system. There, if you are in a public bathhouse, you may smoke and doze and chat with your friends in a dissipation that is said to be exceedingly refreshing. The water is kept hot, perhaps increases in heat, and when you leave the tub it is still regarded as fit for the next customer. In a private house the master and mistress may have their baths first, and the same water serves for the invigoration and diversion of the servants. The ignorant foreigner, who goes into the Japanese tub for the purpose of cleansing his body and with soap spoils the water for further use, is not only guilty of a social error, but entails a hardship on the household, including the servants.—Rochester Democrat.

Recognized.

A Pennsylvania lawyer known throughout the state for his sharpness once met his match in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross examined by him as to how the testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relatives.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," she answered testily.

"Do you mean to tell me that your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Did he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Seems to me he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.

Cheese is strong, a good enquiry from over the cable for supplies. Exports for the week were 41,808 boxes, as compared with 24,032 for the same week last year. The demand for eggs is good, and the market is fairly active at firm prices.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 4142 cattle, 2073 hogs, 2203 sheep and lambs and 183 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Extra choice heavy steers and heifers sold at $8 to $8.50, but few at the latter figure (only two); choice butchers' steers and heifers at $7.75 to $8; good steers and heifers at $7 to $7.65; medium at $6.60 to $6.90; choice cows at $6.75 to $7; good at $6.10 to $6.50; medium cows at $5.50 to $6; canners and cutters at $3.75 to $4.60; bulls at $5 to $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders of good quality were in demand. Good to choice steers, $6.25 to $6.50; medium steers, $5.75 to $6.25; stockers, $4 to $5.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Milkers and springers were in demand at $50 to $105 each, and more would have sold. The bulk sold at $70 to $85 each.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves sold at $9 to $10; good at $5 to $9; medium at $7 to $8; common calves at $6 to $7; common eastern grass calves at $4 to $5.75.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, $5 to $5.75; heavy ewes and rams at $3.50 to $4; culls at $2.50 to $3.50; lambs sold all the way from $7 to $8.75; culls at $6.50 to $6.75.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered at $7.50, and $7.75 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the feature of today's trade was the weaker feeling for running stock owing to the continued liberal supplies coming forward and prices declined 25c to 50c per cwt. as compared with this day week. Trade was slow, bulls selling at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $3.65 to $4 per 100 pounds. There was practically no change in the market for butchers' cattle. Good to choice steers were scarce.

Best steers were offered at $7.25, but the bulk of the trading was done at prices ranging from $6.25 to $7 per cwt. A stronger feeling developed in the market for lambs today, and prices advanced 10c per 100 pounds, owing to lighter receipts. Sales of Ontario stock were made at $7.35 to $7.60, and Quebec at $6.85 to $7.10 per cwt. Sheep were unchanged, ewes selling at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt.

Hog prices have declined 50c to 60c per 100 pounds, owing to the fact that supplies coming forward have been in excess of requirements. Selected lots sold at $7.60 to $8.10; sows at $5.80 to $6, and stags at $3.90 to $4 per cwt. weighed off cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 30.—Cattle—EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 30.—Cattle—Receipts: butchers, $6.75 to $8.50; heifers, $6 to $8; cows, $3.75 to $7; bulls, $5 to $7.50; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.50; stock heifers, $5 to $5.75.

Veals—Receipts, 300; active; $5 to $12.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 1200; active; heavy, mixed, yorkers and pigs, $3.15 to $5.50; rough, $7 to $7.10; stags, $6 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 4000; active; lambs, $6 to $9.75; yearlings, $7 to $8; wethers, $6.25 to $6.75; ewes, $5.25 to $6; sheep, mixed, $5.75 to $6.25.

Bad Blood

is the direct and inevitable result of irregular or constipated bowels and clogged-up kidneys and skin. The undigested food and other waste matter which is allowed to accumulate poisons the blood and the whole system. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills act directly on the bowels, regulating them—on the kidneys, giving them ease and strength to properly filter the blood—and on the skin, opening up the pores. For pure blood and good health take

Dr. Morse's "Indian Root Pills"

John 3:1; Romans 8:17.) These are invited to come to their Father and to address Him as "Our Father which art in Heaven," and ask for the blessings which God has provided for His children, according to His purposes and arrangements. But none others are permitted to come to the Throne of Grace, because not in covenant relationship with the Saviour.—Acts 4:12.

Thus we see that only a limited number may enjoy the privilege of prayer or expect answers to their prayers. But, thank God, others may worship and bow down! Many have this privilege, and the exercise of it is sure to bring a blessing. Whoever has a thankful heart which takes delight in offering worship to the Giver of every good gift will surely be strengthened in righteousness.

Giving Thanks For War.

Very evidently the majority of mankind have an insufficiency of knowledge of God, of the Bible and of the Divine Plan therein set forth, to thank God for the present state of war. But to the Church, whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see the Love of God, St. Paul writes, "In everything give thanks."

Ripe Christians have learned to thank God for life's adversities, convinced that the direct calamity may be overruled for good to His people and glory to His name. But only advanced Christians can give thanks for trials and testings. Similarly in respect to the great European war now in progress, only the well-instructed of God's people may understand the Divine arrangements so thoroughly as to be able to give thanks respecting the war—and able to exercise confident faith that the outcome will mean blessings of instruction and preparation for future blessings.

If the Scriptures did not foretell this time of world-wide "distress of nations," we might not know that God had foreseen it and had provided for its results. But the same Bible that foretells the war tells of its results, saying, "When the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Moreover, it tells that the war is merely the outgrowth of human selfishness, ignorance, superstition and false doctrine, and assures us that although it will lead on to revolution, anarchy and the utter wreck of the present civilization, nevertheless God is prepared for the emergency.

The hour having come for Messiah to take control, He will stand forth at the proper moment, and exclaim to the raging elements of the restless human sea, "Peace! Be still!" And there will be a great calm.

Those who see the war from this viewpoint may indeed give thanks, rejoicing that the reign of Sin and Death will soon be ended, that God's Kingdom will come and His will be done on earth, even as in Heaven!

His Honour Judge Madden, as Chairman of Lennox and Addington Patriotic Fund Committee, and the Committee waited on the Council and gave details of work done by Committee, and asked to be maintained in funds in future as required. After full explanations by members of the Committee, it was immediately moved by Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. Harrison, that after hearing the gentlemen of the Lennox and Addington Patriotic Fund Committee, this Council hereby pledges itself to raise by County rate such sums as from time to time may be required by said Committee. Carried unanimously.

After passing of the resolution the Council and Committee spontaneously rose to their feet and sang "God Save the King."

Dr. Vrooman appeared before the Council and asked for grant to Kingston Tuberculosis Hospital.

Moved by Mr. Longmore, seconded by Mr. Kenny, that the question of such grant be referred to Finance Committee. Carried.

On motion Council adjourned till 2 p.m.

Council resumed.

On motion, Mr. Denison took the chair during the Warden's absence.

Mr. A. B. Carscallen addressed the Council in matter of grants to Continuation Schools.

Warden took chair.

Dr. Northmore, P. Mabey, J. W. Reid, Col. Clyde, E. Scott and others addressed the Council on Continuation School matters.

Moved by Mr. Cook, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that we recommend that a by-law be passed in January session, 1915, putting Continuation Schools on the same basis financially as the High Schools of the County per pupil, providing they are made free schools. Carried.

Account, Ming & Hambly, $19.00, undertakers' account, in connection with murdered colored man at Haag's circus.

Coroner G. H. Cowan was heard in reference to the account.

On motion the account was paid.

Moved by Mr. Creighton, seconded by Mr. Sexsmith, that the different municipalities be allowed to draw moneys from the Treasurer to the extent of one-third of the 1915 appropriation for County Roads, balance of the appropriations of 1914 to be expended for the purpose of cording up stone for next year's work. No money to be drawn until after January 1st next. Carried.

mit to the Minister of Public Works of the Province of Ontario the petition of the Corporation of the County of Lennox and Addington, showing that during the period from 6th December, 1913, to 15th December, 1914, the amount that has been expended upon the County Highways System, and requesting a grant of one-third of that amount, as provided by the Act to aid in the Improvement of Public Highways. Cd. Accounts, Clare Wales, $3.00, and H. Remion, $5.50, re Wm. Crosby, were on motion ordered to be paid, cheque therefor to issue to Mr. R. W. Longmore.

On motion Council adjourned till 2 p.m.

Council resumed.

Moved by Mr. Hicks, seconded by Mr. Sexsmith, that whereas the County Road (York Road No. 9), is the most travelled in this County, passing through the Townships of North Fredericksburgh and Ernestown and Richmond in this County, in fact being a part of a main leading road of Provincial travel, and whereas the share of County Road moneys for County Road purposes allotted to the said Townships is insufficient to put said road in proper condition, and whereas this Council desires to place on record its opinion on the question of putting said road in proper shape for the guidance of the Council for 1915. Be it therefore resolved, that we consider it absolutely necessary for the incoming Council to petition the Public Works Department, Ontario, to make a special grant to assist this County in putting said road in an efficient state, and that a strong deputation of the incoming Council should be appointed to wait on the Government in an endeavor to secure said grant. Carried.

Account, W. G. Wilson, $35.00, was referred to Finance Committee.

Account, J. D. Bell, Court House, supplies, $3.25, was ordered to be paid.

Mr. Denison presented report of the Education and Printing Committee, which was read.

Moved by Mr. Longmore, seconded by Mr. Sexsmith, that the report be adopted. Carried.

On motion the Warden left the chair and same was taken by Mr. Denison.

Moved by Mr. Armstrong, seconded by Mr. Sexsmith, that the hearty thanks of this Council be extended to Mr. Platt, Warden, for the extremely courteous manner in which he discharged the duties of his office, and that this Council entertain the firm hope that he may be spared to take his usual active and usual interest in this County. Carried by a standing vote, after which the members sang "For he's the Jolly Good Fellow."

Mr. Platt resumed the chair and turned thanks for the honors conferred on him.

Moved by Mr. Denison, seconded by Mr. Paul, that a vote of thanks be extended to the Finance Committee for able services rendered in County during the year. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Harrison, seconded by Mr. Sexsmith, that County Road Superintendent be asked to report condition of bridges on County roads at January session. Carried.

On motion, the Reeves and Deputy Reeves were requested to look after snowshovelling and culverts on County Roads till January session.

County Councillors, County Treasurer, County Clerk and Registrar Aid and Caretaker Bell spoke briefly, expressing their appreciation of the services of the Warden.

Minutes of to-day were read, and motion were confirmed, and after God Save the King" Council dispersed.

Shipman vs. Phin.

A decision which has just been rendered in the appellate division before Mulock, C. J., Clute, J., Riddell, J., Sutherland, J., recalls a most interesting case.

Shipman vs. Phin—Francis King (Kingston) for plaintiff. H. A. Burbridge (Hamilton) for defendant. Appeal by plaintiff from judgment of the chancellor of March 11th, 1914. At the trial the action and counterclaim were each dismissed without costs.

Judgment: Plaintiff's appeal is allowed with costs and defendant's appeal is dismissed with costs. Referred to the master at Kingston to assess and apportion the damages, having regard to section 918 of the shipping act, with power to deal with the costs of reference.

This was an action for damages on account of a collision in the Napanee River; when the schooner Winnie Wing, owned by Renben B. Shipman, towed by the tug Ray Stanton, of which Captain Grant Pyke was master, was sunk by a mud scow owned by W. E. Phin, towed by the tug Maggie R. King, belonging to the same owner. Each vessel claimed damages against the other and the action was tried at Napanee with W. S. Herrington, K.C., and John English, of Napanee, acting for the plaintiff, and H. A. Burbridge, of Hamilton, acting for the defendant. The trial judge, Sir John A. Boyd, chancellor of Ontario, found both vessels in fault and dismissed both claim and counterclaim.

Francis King was consulted and advised acceptance of the findings of fact, but also advised an appeal against the decision on, the ground that when both vessels are in fault, even if the action is brought on as this was in the supreme court of Ontario, instead of in admiralty, the damages should be equally divided. This appeal was taken and the defendant entered a cross appeal claiming that the supreme court had no jurisdiction. The appeals resulted as above stated, successfully for the plaintiff, and as the schooner suffered much more substantial damage and was raised at considerable expense, the division of the loss will result in a substantial balance in her favor.

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Moscow, Nov. 25th 1914.

The people of this vicinity were canvassed for support of the Belgian Relief Work by a Committee appointed at a public meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church. The appeal was responded to by liberal quantities of clothing and money, and many promised provisions, should a car be loaded along this branch of the C. N. R. Rumors were afloat that goods already donated, are sidetracked somewhere, and foodstuffs, etc., are going to waste, which somewhat hinders the work, but we now have at hand a communication direct from the Hon. Treas. of the Belgian Relief Work, Montreal, saying that five steamers have already sailed and the sixth will be available about Dec. 1st.

Besides this space will be reserved on steamers during the whole winter. The Central Executive Committee say that the needs are increasing every day and help for these poor sufferers will be needed for many months, and appeal again to all who have not already donated to do so, and asks particularly for eatables, second-hand, or shop-worn clothing, money, etc. The response already made by Canada is touching, and the Committee are EMPEY HILL.

The men of this locality are taking advantage of the fine warm weather and are making great improvements on our church sheds. Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Cook, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on Sunday School work Sunday morning which was highly appreciated. Our school teacher, Miss Tressa McNeill, had the misfortune to get her arm broken on Thursday night by being thrown from a wagon. Mrs. L. Melbourne who has been spending a week with friends at Flinton returned home on Friday. Messrs. Simon and Wm. Howe, of Plainfield, spent Sunday the guests of their sister, Mrs. James McMath. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson spent Sunday evening at Fred Kimmerly's. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kimmerly and Mr. and Mrs. John Mowers spent Sunday evening at Herb Kimmerly's. Mr. and Mrs. John Gibson at Mr. Robt. English's one night recently. The young people are practicing for the Christmas concert, Christmas night. It is sure to be good. Watch for further announcements.

STORMS SORNERS.

One of the most successful bazaars and concerts of the season was held in the new hall, Wilton, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, Wednesday afternoon and evening, Nov. 25th. The hall was beautifully decorated with evergreens, red, white and blue bunting, and Christmas bells. The fancy work booth was a spot of beauty. The arch over the booth was covered with blue and white Christmas bells and patriotic flags were also used. The large display of fine needlework and fancy articles made by the Ladies Aid added to the very attractive booth. Everything for sale found eager purchasers. About eight o'clock the large crowd was called to order by Rev. Mr. White, when refreshments were served in abundance, and after wards a good programme was given. The proceeds amounted to $86. B. Lake has gone to Trenton to spend a couple of weeks with his son. Mrs. H. Lake, after spending a week with Mrs. E. Miller, has returned to her home at Sydenham. R. Miller has purchased a fine automobile. Mrs. G. Simmons is ill with quinsy. A wee boarder has come to stay at W. Griffith's. F. Cole is kept busy taking orders for all kinds of fruit trees. Miss K. Parrot, who is ill, is gaining slowly. Mr. and Mrs. McRory and Miss Shorey, Sydenham, are at E. Miller's. Mrs. R. Metzler and daughter, Odessa, are at R. Asselstine's. Rev. Mr. White and family, Mrs. E. Miller, Wilton, Mrs. H. Lake, Sydenham, are at J. E. Storms'. W. L. Storms and family, Florida, W. Shibley and family, Star Corners, are at S. Simmonds'. J. Wallace and wife are at Mrs. W. Parrot's.

COPELAND'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

Is a medicine—not a serum. More over, it is a medicine with a record. It has won cases of consumption given up as hopeless by doctors and specialists. Ask for the record of David Warnock's case, one of the most striking illustrations of its power. So desperate was Mr. Warnock's condition that the specialist called in by his doctor said that he was past all hope of recovery and could not live more than 8 or 10 days. To-day, Mr. Warnock is alive and well; still living in Toronto. At the lowest ebb of his illness, he weighed only 87 lbs., and within four months of that time he had regained his normal weight of 153 lbs. The facts of that case are not confined to ourselves, but can be corroborated by a dozen or more independent witnesses.

In the same manner as this medicine has won severe cases of consumption, it has proved most effective in stubborn cases of chronic bronchitis; which had resisted for over 30 years all that medical men and other medicine could do for them.

A letter from a well-known resident of the east side of Toronto will serve to show how beneficial this medicine is for bronchitis. It reads as follows:

Mr. W. R. Copeland:
Dear Sir,—For some time past I have been thinking that it is my duty to write and tell you what a boon your medicine has been to me. I have suffered with what medical men call Chronic Bronchitis for over 30 years, and have had pneumonia twice, being treated by some of our best physicians, and have never got anything to do me the same good as your Consumption Cure.

I would like to recommend your medicine to every one suffering with throat, bronchial or lung troubles. I am sure it has been a blessing to me, and will be to any who try it. You can do as you see fit with this letter.

Yours sincerely, FLESHER.
(Sgd.) E. FLESHER.
25 Howland Road, Toronto.

"Copeland's Cure for Consumption" has been on the market now for three years. During which time hundreds of letters have been received from all classes of people telling us how benefited they have been by its use.

If you are a consumptive, or know of a consumptive or anyone suffering from weak lungs or throat, copies of letters, bearing upon their ailment that others have suffered and conquered by taking this medicine, will gladly be sent on request.

which he thought would not be delayed, and the overpowering success of which seemed to him certain. Public opinion, in its turn, permitted itself to be won over by the passions of the military party and came to consider the affair of Agadir as a defeat for Germany. It regarded the existence of a strong France as a danger to Germany and the breaking out of a European war as the only remedy for all difficulties and all uncertainties.

"These bellicose dispositions constituted a permanent danger for the peace of Europe."

From a perusal of the six other chapters of the Yellow Book, which are devoted to the diplomatic negotiations carried on in the month of July, there is to be deduced and supported by evidence, the following impressions:

FOUR ATTEMPTS.

"That the combination between Austria and Germany had decided upon war, and that on four successive occasions that combination endeavored to precipitate war by violent proceedings, the purpose of which was to prevent, or to insure the failure of all efforts at conciliation."

The statement then reviews the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia on July 24. Serbia's acceptance of the rigorous conditions, Austria's demand for full compliance within two days, and Germany's uniting herself without restriction to her ally's cause with the demand that other powers allow Austria to crush Serbia.

The powers forming the triple entente asked Vienna to extend the period allowed Serbia for a reply. Austria, "fearful that she would be left without a pretext of war," ignored the request and withdrew her minister from Belgrade.

"With this development the situation became considerably aggravated. The powers of the triple entente, however, still endeavored to bring about a settlement. In the meantime M. Von Schoen, the German ambassador in Paris, came to the Quai d'Orsay and demanded that France exert her influence on Russia in a peaceful sense, but he refused to exert similar peaceful influence at Vienna."

BRITAIN FOR PEACE.

The report then goes on to show how England tried to avoid a crisis thru mediation of the Austro-Serb difficulty by the four powers not directly interested therein. France and Russia accepted this proposal, but Germany refused. The powers of the triple entente did not, however, give up all hope, and Sir Edward Grey, British foreign secretary, started a new project for four-sided mediation, in which Russia joined at the demand of France. Germany, however, evaded this.

The French report shows how the triple entente in many other instances endeavored to avoid the conflict, Germany balking every effort. In conclusion, the French report says:

"France, moved by a deep love of peace, exhausted every means of conciliation at her command. The successive violations of the neutrality of Luxembourg, and of Belgium and the invasion of her own territory were necessary before she decided to draw the sword to defend her very life."

The other week while on a little urney to Toronto, I was much im-ressed with the fact that Canadian ntiment toward the United States undergoing a change.

As yet it is only a nebulous idea only taking on substantial form, it to the eyes that see it is quite far.

And that is, that the people of this untry and of the Dominion are, ter all, akin, and that their interests are one and the same.

The United States wants the goodwill of Canada, and Canada needs the endly support of the United States.
Much of the good feeling that now exists between these two great nations

I believe, due almost entirely to a liberalizing work and beneficent influence of that great and good man at gentleman superbus who has shined in the limelight of Canadian and world politics for these forty years and more, but whose heart yet beats to the high hope of youth—Sir Alfred Laurier.

aurier is Canada at its best. Born in the French Province of Quebec, surrounded with French traditions, and the first French-Canadian to be premier. He was the prime mover in settling an end forever to that Tory attitude of hostility and churlishness toward the United States which at one time swayed Canada from coast to coast.

more than any other one man he has taught the Dominion to think rationally, and to take her place as one of the great nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Not long ago he said in London to assembled statesmen of the British Empire :

"I am an admirer of the American people. I admire the great fight they've made in the past for freedom. I admire the great advance they have made in civilization. I love the United States. We are giving to the world the spectacle of brethren living in peace. We have the longest frontier dividing any two nations. On that frontier there is not a fortress, not a gun, not a soldier."

man in all his undertakings can be explained only in the light of his persuasive personality. His graciousness of speech, his charm of manner, his varied accomplishments and his remarkable eloquence—combined with a fine, handsome face and wonderful distinction of bearing—set him apart as one of the most efficient and versatile personalities that the world has ever seen.

He mixes in no idle gossip. He is above all petty scrimmages and scrambles for place and power. He is a man among men.

As a public speaker he is frank, witty, appreciative and unresentful.

The saving grace of humor has stood him in good stead in his hours of trial and defeat, and has helped him on many an occasion when dealing with the beef-eating, insular Anglophile that at one time roamed wild in Canada.

Laurier is always perfectly willing to admit that what his opponents say of him is true—only before he gets through you are quite inclined to believe with him that the slur was really a compliment in disguise.

I remember when the annexation talk was at its height, some Britishers came to him, and the speaker, a pompous fellow with bristling sideburns, said: "Pray, now, sir, let us have your candid opinion. Are not at this very moment the American people coveting Canada?"

And Sir Wilfrid, with a twinkle in his eye, solemnly replied: "I should be very much surprised if they were not. I'm sure it would be quite human if they did, and certainly quite American, for every American knows a good thing when he sees it."

Essentially Wilfred Laurier represents the new time. He is a democrat in his mode of thinking and in his habit of life.

He is get-at-able, approachable, kindly, generous, friendly. He is gracious to all men, but he toadies to no one.

He is a business man. He believes in creation, evolution, development, transportation, distribution. Like Terence he might say: "I am a man, and nothing that is human is alien to me."

He believes in Canada and its future. And he also believes that the future of Canada is closely linked with that of the United States.

He is a universal citizen. He realizes that we are practically one people, that England's Shakespeare is our Shakespeare, and that our history merges off and becomes English history.

Largely, our interests, our hopes and our destinies are one.

Only yesterday this strong, virile, splendid man, with a head of silver and a heart of gold, who may even yet be Canada's salvation, said:

"A dominating power, either on land or sea, will not hereafter be tolerated. Supreme power in either a man or a nation is to be feared—for nations are made up of men, and power unrestrained tends to tyranny."

Such, to me, is Sir Wilfred Laurier, who, on the 20th of November, entered joyfully upon the seventy-fourth year of his life. May he live long and enjoy all that he deserves!—which is the most generous wish I can express.

THE BRANDING OF DAIRY BUTTER

The Dairy Industry Act, 1914, is largely a revision of Part VIII of the Inspection and Sale Act, which Part it repeals.

The underlying principle of the law is protection to the consumer, the honest manufacturer and the honest trader. The whole object of the law is to prevent misrepresentation. No reasonable practice is interfered with.

A new sub-section in the Act deals with the weight of butter as put up in prints or blocks. This sub-section reads as follows :—

"No person shall sell, offer, or have in his possession for sale, any butter moulded or cut into prints, blocks, squares or pats, unless such prints, blocks, squares or pats are of the full net weight of one-quarter pound, one-half pound, one pound or two pounds at the time they are moulded or cut. Nothing in this paragraph shall be held to apply to butter in rolls or lumps of indiscriminate weight as sold by farmers."

The Regulations made under the authority of the Act came into force on September 1st, and provide that when dairy butter is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter," in letters at least one-quarter inch square, in addition to any other wording that the butter maker may desire to use. There is nothing in the Act or Regulations to prevent the use of the word "Separator" in addition to the words "Dairy Butter" but no such grade of butter as "Separator" is recognized by the law. The Butter Act of 1903 defined only two grades, namely, "Dairy" and "Creamery." The Dairy Industry Act of 1914 defines a third grade as "Whey" butter. Buttermakers may use any form of printing or branding including the words "Dairy Butter," which is not inconsistent with the definition of dairy butter. Butter in rolls, crocks or tubs is not required to be branded.

The definition of dairy butter in section 3 of the Act and is the same as it was in The Butter Act of 1903. It reads as follows:—

(d) "dairy" means a place where the milk or cream of less than fifty cows is manufactured into butter :

(e) "dairy butter" means butter which is manufactured in a dairy.

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

"And will it turn you away from Rod?"

"No. It draws me nearer to him than ever. He shall never know the truth. Why should he? Just as he crept close to you that night, all unconscious of the reason you had for shrinking from him, so he has crept close to me in these years of trial when your mind has been wandering."

"Life is so strange. To think that this child, of all others, should have been a comfort to you! The Lord's hand is in it!" whispered Mrs. Boynton feebly.

"His boyish belief in me, his companionship, have kept the breath of hope alive in me. That's all I can say."

"The Bible story is happening over again in our lives, then. Don't you remember that Aaron's rod budded and blossomed and bore fruit and that the miracle kept the rebels from murmuring?"

"This rebel never will murmur again, mother," and Ivory rose to leave the room. "Now that you have shed your burden you will grow stronger and life will be all joy, for Waitstill will come to us soon, and we can shake off these miseries and be a happy family once more."

"It is she who has helped me most to find the thread, pouring sympathy and strength into me, nursing me, loving me, because she loved my wonderful son. Oh, how blest among women I am to have lived long enough to see you happy!"

And as Ivory kissed his mother and blew out the candle she whispered to herself, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Deacon's Waterloo.

MRS. MASON'S welcome to Waitstill was unexpectedly hearty, much heartier than it would have been six months before, when she regarded Mrs. Boynton as little less than a harmless lunatic, of no use as a neighbor, and when she knew nothing more of Ivory than she could gather by his occasional drive or walk past her door with a civil greeting.

Ivory made himself quickly at home and helped the old lady to get a room ready for Waitstill before he drove back for a look at his mother and then on to carry out his impetuous and romantic scheme of routing out the town clerk and announcing his intended marriage.

Waitstill slept like the shepherd boy in "The Pilgrim's Progress," with the "herb called heart's ease" in her bosom. She opened her eyes next morn-

Miss Peters of Union Falls, an aged spinster with weak lungs, had the impertinence to tell him that she feared she couldn't stand the cold in his house; she had heard he was very particular about the amount of wood that was burned. There was not another free woman within eight miles, and the deacon was chafing under the mortification of being continually obliged to state the reasons of his needing a housekeeper. The only hope, it seemed, lay in going to Saco and hiring a stranger, a plan not at all to his liking, as it was sure to involve him in extra expense.

Muttering threats against the universe in general, he drove home by way of Milliken's mills, thinking of the unfed hens, the unmilked cow, the unwashed dishes, the unchurned cream and, above all, of his unchastened daughters, his rage increasing with every step until it was nearly at the white heat of the night before.

"Do you want to come and housekeep for me?"

A long stretch of hill brought the tired old mare to a slow walk and enabled the deacon to see the Widow Tillman clipping the geraniums that stood in tin cans on the shelf of her kitchen window.

Now, Foxwell Baxter had never been a village Lothario at any age nor frequented the society of such. Of late years, indeed, he had frequented no society of any kind, so that he had missed, for instance, Abel Day's description of the Widow Tillman as a "reg'lar syreen," though he vaguely remembered that some of the Baptist sisters had questioned the authenticity of her conversion by their young and attractive minister. She made a pleasant picture at the window. She was a free woman. She was a comparative newcomer to the village, and her mind had not been poisoned with feminine gossip—in a word, she was a distinctly hopeful subject, and, acting on a blind and sudden impulse, he turned into the yard, flung the reins over the mare's neck and knocked at the back door.

"Her character's no worse than mine by now if Aunt Abby Cole's on the road," he thought grimly, "an' if the Wilsons see my sleigh inside of a wider fence so much the better. It'll give 'em a jog. Good mornin', Mrs. Tillman!" he said to the miller's question? I'm kind of lonesome here. That's the only reason I'd consider a move."

"No need o' bein' lonesome down to the Falls," said the deacon. "And I'm in an' out all day, between the barn an' the store."

This, indeed, was not a pleasant prospect, but Jane Tillman had faced worse ones in her time.

"I'm no hand at any work outside the house," she observed, as if reflecting. "I can truthfully say I'm a good cook and have a great faculty for making a little go a long ways." (She considered this a master stroke, and, in fact, it was, for the deacon's mouth absolutely watered at this apparently unconscious comprehension of his disposition.) "But I'm no hand at any chores in the barn or shed," she continued. "My husband would never allow me to do that kind of work."

"Perhaps I could git a boy to help out. I've been kind o' thinkin' o' that lately. What wages would you expect if I paid a boy for the rough work?" asked the deacon tremulously.

"Well, to tell the truth, I don't quite fancy the idea of taking wages. Judge Dickinson wants me to go to Alfred and housekeep for him and named $12 a month. It's good pay, and I haven't said 'No.' But my rent is small here, I'm my own mistress, and I don't feel like giving up my privileges."

"Twelve dollars a month!" He had never thought of approaching that sum, and he saw the heap of unwashed dishes growing day by day and the cream souring on the milk pans. Suddenly an idea sprang full born into the deacon's mind. (Jed Morrill's "Old Driver" must have been close at hand!) Would Jane Tillman marry him? No woman in the three villages would be more obnoxious to his daughters; that in itself was a distinct gain. She was a fine, robust figure of a woman in her early forties, and he thought, after all, that the hollow chested, spindle shanked kind were more expensive to feed on the whole than their better padded sisters. He had never had any difficulty in managing wives and thought himself quite equal to one more bout, even at sixty-five, though he had just the faintest suspicion that the high color on Mrs. Tillman's prominent cheek bones, the vigor shown in the coarse black hair and handsome eyebrows, might make this task a little more difficult than his previous ones.

"If you'd like to have a home o' your own 'bout payin' rent, you've only got to say the word an' I'll make you Mrs. Baxter," said the deacon. "There'll be nobody to interfere with you, an' a handsome legacy if I die first, for none o' my few savin's is goin' to my daughters, I can promise you that!"

The deacon threw out this tempting bait advisedly, for at this moment he would have poured his board into the lap of any woman who would help him to avenge his fancied wrongs.

This was information indeed! The "few savings" alluded to amounted to some thousands, Jane Tillman knew. Had she not better burn her ships behind her, take the risks and have faith in her own powers? She was getting along in years, and her charms of person were lessening with every day that passed over her head. If the deacon's queer ways grew too queer, she thought, an appeal to the doctor and the minister might provide a way of escape and a neat little income to boot. So, on the whole, the marriage, though much against her natural inclinations, moment, turned in her seat and said:

"Mark, dear, do you think your ther would care if I spent the two dollar gold piece he gave me for Waitstill? She will be married in a fortnight, and if my father does not give her the few things she owns she will go to her husband more ill provided even than I was. I have so much dear Mark, and she so little."

"It's your own wedding present use as you wish," Mark answered, "and it's exactly like you to give away. Go ahead and spend it if you want to. I can always earn enough keep you without anybody's help. And Mark, after cracking the waltingloriously, kissed his wife just over the violet ribbons, and, as sleigh bells jingling, they sped on the snow toward what seemed Paradise to them, the New Hampshire village where they had been married and where their new life would begin."

So a few days later Waitstill received a great parcel which relieved her of many feminine anxieties, and she began to shape and cut and stitch during all the hours she had to herself. They were not many, for every day she trudged to the Boynton farm to begin with youthful enthusiasm at household tasks that were so soon to be hers by right.

"Don't waste too much time at strength here, my dearest," said Ivory. "Do you suppose for a moment I should keep you long on this lonely farm? I am ready for admission to the bar or am fitted to teach in the best school in New England. Nothing has held me here but my mother, and in her present condition of mind we can safely take her anywhere. We will never live where there are so many men and associations to sadden and hamper us, but go where the best opportunity offers and as soon as possible. My wife will be a pearl of great price," he added fondly, "and I intend to provide a right setting for her!"

Ivory was right. Waitstill Baxter was indeed a jewel of a woman. She had little knowledge but much wisdom, and after all knowledge stands for the leaves on a tree and wisdom for the fruit. There was infinite richness in the girl, a richness that had been growing and ripening through the years that she thought so gray and wasted.

Those lonely tasks, too hard for girl's hands, those unrewarded drudgeries, those days of faithful labor and out of doors, those evenings of self sacrifice over the mending basket, the quiet avoidance of all that might vex her father's crusty temper, her patience with his miserly exactions, his hourly holding back of the hasty work—all these had played their part; and these had been somehow welded into a strong, sunny, steady life wisdom there is no better name for it, and she had unconsciously the best of a harvest to bring up dower to a husband who was worthy of her.

These were quietly happy days at the farm, for Mrs. Boynton took a new transient hold upon life that defied even the doctor. Rodman was nearly as ardent a lover as Ivory, hovering about Waitstill and exclaiming, "You never stay to supper, and it's lonesome evenings without you! Will it never be time for you to come and live with us, Waity, dear? The day crawl so slowly!" At which Ivory would laugh, push him away and draw Waitstill nearer to his own side, saying, "If you are in a hurry, you young cormorant, what do you think of me?"

"We can never wait two more days could gather by his occasional drive or walk past her door with a civil greeting.

Ivory made himself quickly at home and helped the old lady to get a room ready for Waitstill before he drove back for a look at his mother and then on to carry out his impetuous and romantic scheme of routing out the town clerk and announcing his intended marriage.

Waitstill slept like the shepherd boy in "The Pilgrim's Progress," with the "herb called heart's ease" in her bosom. She opened her eyes next morning from the depths of Mrs. Mason's best feather bed and looked wonderingly about the room, with all its unaccustomed surroundings. She heard the rattle of fire irons and the clatter of dishes below, the first time in all her woman's life that preparations for breakfast had ever greeted her ears when she had not been an active participant in them.

She lay quite still for a quarter of an hour, tired in body and mind, but incredibly happy in spirit, marveling at the changes wrought in her during the day preceding, the most eventful one in her history.

The image of Ivory had been all through the night in the foreground of her dreams and in her moments of wakefulness, both made blissful by the heaven of anticipation that dawned upon her. Was ever man so wise, so tender and gentle, so strong, so comprehending? What mattered the absence of worldly goods, the presence of care and anxiety, when a woman had a steady hand to hold, a steadfast heart to trust, a man who would love her and stand by her, whatever befell?

Then the face of Ivory's mother would swim into the mental picture; the pale face, as white as the pillow it lay upon; the face with its aureole of ashen hair, and the wistful blue eyes that begged of God and her children some peace before they closed on life.

The vision of her sister was a joyful one, and her heart was at peace about her, the plucky little princess who had blazed the way out of the ogre's castle.

She saw Patty clearly as a future fine lady, in velvets and satins and furs, bewitching everybody by her gay spirits, her piquant vivacity, and the loving heart that lay underneath all the nonsense and gave it warmth and color.

The remembrance of her father alone on the hilltop did indeed trouble Waitstill. Self reproach, in the true sense of the word, she did not, could not, feel.

When she was thankfully eating her breakfast with Mrs. Mason a little later and waiting for Ivory to call for them both and take them to the Boynton farm, she little knew what was going on at her old home in these very hours, when, to tell the truth, she would have liked to slip in, had it been possible, wash the morning dishes, skim the cream, do the week's churning, make her father's bed and slip out again into the dear shelter of love that awaited her.

The deacon had passed a good part of the night in scheming and contriving, and when he drank his self-made cup of muddy coffee at 7 o'clock next morning he had formed several plans that were to be immediately frustrated, had he known it, by the exasperating and suspicious nature of the ladies involved in them.

At 8 he had left the house, started Bill Morrill at the store and was on the road in search of vengeance and a housekeeper. Old Mrs. Atkins of Deerwander sniffed at the wages offered.

picture at the window. She was a free woman. She was a comparative newcomer to the village, and her mind had not been poisoned with feminine gossip—in a word, she was a distinctly hopeful subject, and, acting on a blind and sudden impulse, he turned into the yard, flung the reins over the mare's neck and knocked at the back door.

"Her character's no worse than mine by now if Aunt Abby Cole's on the road," he thought grimly, "and if the Wilsons see my sleigh inside of a wider fence so much the better. It'll give 'em a jog. Good mornin', Mis' Tillman," he said to the smiling lady. "I'll come to the p'int at once. My youngest daughter has married Mark Wilson against my will an' gone away from town, an' the older one's chosen a husband still less to my likin'. Do you want to come and housekeep for me?"

"I surmised something was going on," returned Mrs. Tillman. "I saw Patty and Mark drive away early this morning, with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson wrapping the girl up and putting a hot soapstone in the sleigh and considerable kissing and hugging thrown in."

This knowledge added fuel to the flame that was burning fiercely in the deacon's breast.

"Well, how about the housekeepin'?" he asked, trying not to show his eagerness and not recognizing himself at all in the enterprise in which he found himself indulging.

"I'm very comfortable here," the lady responded artfully, "and I don't know I care to make any change, thank you. I didn't like the village much at first, after living in larger places, but now I'm acquainted it kind of gains on me."

Her reply was carefully framed, for her mind worked with great rapidity, and she was mistress of the situation almost as soon as she saw the deacon alighting from his sleigh. He was not the sort of a man to be a casual caller, and his manner bespoke an urgent errand. She had a pension of $8 a month, but over and above that sum her living was precarious. She made coats, and she had never known want, for she was a master hand at dealing with the opposite sex. Deacon Baxter, according to common report, had ten or fifteen thousand dollars stowed away in the banks, so the situation would be as simple as possible under ordinary circumstances. It was as easy to turn out one man's pockets as another's when he was a normal human being, but Deacon Baxter was a different proposition.

"I wonder how long he's likely to live," she thought, glancing at him covertly out of the tail of her eye. "His evil temper must have driven more than one nail in his coffin. I wonder if I refuse to housekeep whether I'll get—a better offer. I wonder if I could manage him if I got him. I'd rather like to set in the Baxter pew at the orthodox meeting house after the way some of the Baptist sisters have snubbed me since I come here."

Not a vestige of these incendiary thoughts showed in her comely countenance.

"I'd make the wages fair," urged the deacon, looking round the clean kitchen, with the breakfast table sitting near the sunny window and the odor of corned beef and cabbage issuing temptingly from a boiling pot on the fire. "I hope she ain't a great meat eater," he thought, "but it's too soon to cross that bridge yet awhile."

"I've no doubt of it," said the widow, wondering if her voice rang true "but I've got a pension, and why should I leave this cozy little home? Would I better myself any—that's the

This was information indeed! The "few savings" alluded to amounted to some thousands, Jane Tillman knew. Had she not better burn her ships behind her, take the risks and have faith in her own powers? She was getting along in years, and her charms of person were lessening with every day that passed over her head. If the deacon's queer ways grew too queer, she thought, an appeal to the doctor and the minister might provide a way of escape and a neat little income to boot. So, on the whole, the marriage, though much against her natural inclinations, seemed to be providentially arranged.

If Jane Tillman became Mrs. Baxter she intended to get the whip hand and keep it, but nothing was further from her intention than to make the deacon miserable if she could help it. That was not her disposition, and so, when the deluded man left her house, he had made more concessions in a single hour than in all the former years of his life.

His future spouse was to write out a little paper for his signature; just a friendly little paper to be kept quite private and confidential between themselves, stating that she was to do no work outside of the house; that her pension was to be her own; that she was to have $5 in cash on the first of every month in lieu of wages, and that in case of his death occurring first she was to have a third of his estate, and the whole of it if at the time of his decease he was still pleased with his bargain. The only points in this contract that the deacon really understood were that he was paying only $5 a month for a housekeeper to whom a judge had offered $12; that, as he had expected to pay at least $8, he could get a boy for the remaining $3, and so be none the worse in pocket; also, that if he could keep his daughters from getting his money, he didn't care a bang who had it, as he hated the whole human race with entire impartiality. If Jane Tillman didn't behave herself he had pleasing visions of converting most of his fortune into cash and having it dropped off the bridge some dark night, when the doctor had given him up and proved to his satisfaction that death would occur in the near future.

All this being harmoniously settled, the deacon drove away and caused the announcement of his immediate marriage to be posted directly below that of Waitstill and Ivory Boynton.

A "spite match," the community in general called the deacon's marriage, and many a man and many a woman, too, regarding the amazing publishing notice in the frame up at the meeting house, felt that in Jane Tillman Deacon Baxter had met his Waterloo.

CHAPTER XXX.

Two Heavens.

At the very moment that Deacon Baxter was starting out on his quest for a housekeeper, Patty and Mark drove into the Mason dooryard, and the sisters flew into each other's arms. The dress that Mark had bought for Patty was the usual charming and unsuitable offering of a man's spontaneous affection, being of dark violet cloth with a wadded cape lined with satin.

Waitstill in her plain hussy-woolsey was entranced with Patty's beauty and elegance, and the two girls had a few minutes of sisterly talk, of interchange of radiant hopes and confidences before Mark tore them apart, their cheeks wet with happy tears.

As the Mason house faded from view Patty waved her muff until the last these were query happy days the farm, for Mrs. Boynton took a transient hold upon life that calmed even the doctor. Rodman, nearly as ardent a lover as Ivory, entering about Waitstill and exclaiming, "You never stay to supper, and it's lonesome evenings without you! It never be time for you to come live with us, Waity, dear? The deacon crawl so slowly!" At which Ivory would laugh, push him away and drive Waitstill nearer to his own side, saying, "If you are in a hurry, you cormorant, what do you think of me?"

"We can never wait two more days, Rod; let us kidnap her! Let us take the old hobsled and run over to Hampshire where one can be married the minute one feels like it. I could do it between sunrise and moonrise and be at home for a late supper. Would she be too tired to bake biscuits for us, do you think? Would you say, Rod, will you be a man?" And there would be youthful unaccustomed laughter floating from the kitchen or living room, bringing a smile of content to Lois Boynton's face as she lay propped up in bed with her open Bible beside her. "binds up the broken hearted," she whispered to herself. "He gives us them a garland for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

The quiet wedding was over. There had been neither feasting nor dancing nor presents nor bridal journey, only homecoming that meant as deep a sacred a joy, as fervent gratitude any four hearts ever contained in the world. But the laughter ceased though the happiness flowed slier underneath, almost forgotten in sudden sorrow that overcame them for it fell out that Lois Boynton only waited as it were for the marriage and could stay no longer.

 There are two heavens ***
Both made of love—one, inconceivable even by the other, so divine it is; The other, far on this side of the stars By men called home.

And these two heavens met over Boynton's during these cold, white-glistening December days.

Lois Boynton found hers first. At a windy moonlit night a mornal dawned in which a hush seemed to be on the earth. The cattle huddled together in the farmyards and the foxes shrank into their feathers. The snow was gray, and suddenly the white heralds came floating down like snow seeking for paths and camping places.

Waitstill turned Mrs. Boynton's back so that she could look out of the window. Slope after slope, dazzling white crust, rose one upon another and vanished as they slipped away into dark green of the pine forests.

Then,
 there fell from out the skies
A feathery whiteness over all the land
A strange, soft, spotless something, pure as light.

It could not be called a storm, for there had been no wind since sunrise, whirling fury, no drifting, only a steady, solemn fall of crystal flakes hour after hour, hour after hour.

Mrs. Boynton's book of books was open on the bed, and her finger marked a passage in her favorite Bible poet.

"Here it is, daughter," she whispered. "I have found it, in the same chapter where the morning stars shined together and the sons of God shouted ment, turned in her seat and said: "Mark, dear, do you think your father would care if I spent the twenty dollar gold piece he gave me for Waitstill? She will be married in a fortnight, and if my father does not give me the few things she owns she will give to her husband more ill provided than I was. I have so much, dear Mark, and she so little." "It's your own wedding present to me as you wish," Mark answered, and it's exactly like you to give it away. Go ahead and spend it if you want to. I can always earn enough to help you without anybody's help." And Mark, after cracking the whip indignantly, kissed his wife just over the violet ribbons, and, with high bells jingling, they sped over the snow toward what seemed Paradise to them, the New Hampshire village where they had been married and where their new life would begin. A few days later Waitstill received a great parcel which relieved her many feminine anxieties, and she began to shape and cut and stitch during all the hours she had to herself. I am ready for admission to the bar or I am fitted to teach in the best school in New England. Nothing has held me here but my mother, and in her present condition of mind we can safely leave her anywhere. We will never see where there are so many memories and associations to sadden and amper us, but go where the best opportunity offers and as soon as may be. My wife will be a pearl of great price," he added fondly, "and I intend to provide a right setting for her!" Ivory was right. Waitstill Baxter is indeed a jewel of a woman. She had little knowledge but much wisdom, and after all knowledge stands for the leaves on a tree and wisdom for the fruit. There was infinite richness in the girl, a richness that had been growing and ripening through the years that she thought so gray and wasted.

Those lonely tasks, too hard for a girl's hands, those unrewarded drudgeries, those days of faithful labor in and out of doors, those evenings of self-sacrifice over the mending basket, the quiet avoidance of all that might vex her father's crusty temper, her patience with his miserly exactions, the curiously holding back of the hasty word all these had played their part; all these had been somehow welded into a strong, sunny, steady life wisdom. There is no better name for it, and so she had unconsciously the best of all devices to bring up dower to a husband who was worthy of her.

These were quietly happy days at the farm, for Mrs. Boynton took a new transient hold upon life that defied even the doctor. Rodman was rarely as ardent a lover as Ivory, hovering about Waitstill and exclaiming: "You never stay to supper, and it's so desolate evenings without you! Will you never be time for you to come and dine with us, Waity, dear? The days wait so slowly!" At which Ivory would laugh, push him away and draw Waitstill nearer to his own side, saying, "If you are in a hurry, you young rascal, what do you think of me?" "We can never wait two more days, joy. The Lord speaks to Job out of the whirlwind and says, 'Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?' Sit near me, Waitstill, and look out on the hills. 'Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?' No, not yet, but please God I shall, and into many other treasures soon," and she closed her eyes.

"Our little brother is never in the way."

All day long the air ways were filled with the glittering army of the snowflakes, all day long the snow grew deeper and deeper on the ground, and on the breath of some white winged wonder that passed Lois Boynton's window her white soul forsook its "earth lot" and took flight at last.

They watched beside her, but never knew the moment of her going. Her face was so like an angel's in its shining serenity that the few who loved her best could not look upon her with anything but reverent joy. On earth she had known nothing but the "broken arcs," but in heaven she would find the "perfect round." There at last, on the other side of the stars, she could remember right, poor Lois Boynton!

For weeks afterward the village was shrouded in snow as it had never been before within memory, but in every happy household the home life deepened day by day. The books came out in the long evenings; the grandfathers told old tales under the inspiration of the hearth fire; the children gathered on their wooden stools to roast apples and pop corn, and hearts came closer together than when summer called the housemates to wander here and there in fields and woods and beside the river.

Over at Boynton's, when the snow was whirling and the wind howling round the chimneys of the high gabled old farmhouse, when every window had its frame of ermine and fringe of icicles and the sleet rattled furiously against the glass, then Ivory would throw a great back log on the bank of coals between the firelogs, the kettle would begin to sing and the cat come from some snug corner to curl and purr on the braided hearth rug.

School was in session, and Ivory and Rod had their textbooks of an evening, eager, curious eyes search the waysides for adventure, but their babble and laughter are oftentimes heard from the ruins of an old house hidden by great trees. The stones of the cellar, all overgrown with blackberry vines, are still there, and a fragment of the brick chimney, where swallows build their nests from year to year. A wilderness of weeds, tall and luxuriant, springs up to hide the stone over which Jacob Cochrane stepped daily when he issued from his door, and the polished stick with which three-year-old Pntty beats a tattoo may be a round from the very chair in which he sat, expounding the Bible according to his own vision. The thickets of sweet clover and red tipped grasses, of waving ferns and young alder bushes hide all of ugliness that belongs to the deserted spot and serve as a miniature forest in whose shade the younglings foreshadow the future at their play of home building and housekeeping. In a far corner, altogether concealed from the passerby, there is a secret treasure, a wonderful rosebush, its green leaves shining with health and vigor. When the July sun is turning the hayfields yellow the children part the bushes in the leafy corner and little Waitstill Boynton steps cautiously in to gather one splendid rose, "for father and mother."

Jacob Cochrane's heart, with all its faults and frailties, has long been at peace. On a chill, dreary night in November all that was mortal of him was raised from its unhonored resting place, not far from the ruins of his old abode, and borne by three of his disciples far away to another state. The gravestones were replaced, face downward, deep, deep in the earth, and the sod laid back upon them, so that no man thenceforward could mark the place of the prophet's transient burial amid the scenes of his first and only triumphant ministry.

"It is a sad story, Jacob Cochrane's," Waitstill said to her husband when she first discovered that her children had chosen the deserted spot for their play, "and yet, Ivory, the red rose blooms and blooms in the ruins of the man's house, and perhaps somewhere in the world he has left a message that matches the rose."

Over at Boyntons', when the snow was whirling and the wind howling round the chimneys of the high gabled old farmhouse, when every window had its frame of ermine and fringe of icicles and the sleet rattled furiously against the glass, then Ivory would throw a great bag log on the bank of coals between the firelogs, the kettle would begin to sing and the cat come from some snug corner to curl and purr on the braided hearth rug.

School was in session, and Ivory and Rod had their textbooks of an evening, but, oh, what a new and strange joy to study when there was a sweet woman sitting near with her workbasket—a woman wearing a shining braid of hair as if it were a coronet; a woman of clear eyes and tender lips, one who could feel as well as think, one who could be a man's comrade as well as his dear love! Truly the second heaven, the one on "this side of the stars, by men called home," was very present over at Boyntons'.

Sometimes the broad seated old hair-cloth sofa would be drawn in front of the fire, and Ivory, laying his pipe and his Greek grammar on the table, would take some lighter book and open it on his knee. Waitstill would lift her eyes from her sewing to meet her husband's glance that spoke longing for her closer companionship and, gladly leaving her work and slipping into the place by his side, she would put her elbow on his shoulder and read with him.

Once Rod from his place at a table on the other side of the room looked and looked at them with a kind of instant beyond his years and finally crept up to Waitstill and, putting an arm through hers, nestled his curly head on her shoulder with the quaint charm and grace that belonged to him.

It was a young and beautiful shoulder, Waitstill's, and there had always been and would always be a gracious curve in it where a child's head might lie in comfort. Presently with a shy pressure, Rod whispered: "Shall I sit in the other room, Waitstill and Ivory? Am I in the way?"

Ivory looked up from his book quietly shaking his head, while Waitstill put her arm around the boy and drew him closer.

"Our little brother is never in the way," she said, as she kissed him.

On midsummer evenings the windows of the old farmhouse over at Boynton's gleam with unaccustomed lights and voices break the stillness, lessening the gloom of the long grass grown lane of Lois Boynton's watching in days gone by. On sunny mornings there is a merry babel of children's chatter, mingled with gentle maternal warnings, for this is a new brood of young things, and the river is calling them as it has called all the others who ever came within the circle of its magic. The fragile harebells hanging their blue heads from the crevices of the rocks; the brilliant columbines swaying to and fro on their tall stalks; the patches of gleaming sand in shallow places beckoning little bare feet to come and tread them; the glint of silver minnows darting hither and thither in some still pool; the tempestuous journey of some weather beaten log, fighting its way downstream—here is life in abundance, luring the child to share its risks and its joys.

When Waitstill's boys and Patty's girls come back to the farm they play by Saco water as their mothers and their fathers did before them. The paths through the pine woods along the river's brink are trodden smooth by their restless, wandering feet. Their sold laid back upon them, so that no man thenceforward could mark the place of the prophet's transient burial amid the scenes of his first and only triumphant ministry.

"It is a sad story, Jacob Cochrane's," Waitstill said to her husband when she first discovered that her children had chosen the deserted spot for their play, "and yet, Ivory, the red rose blooms and blooms in the ruins of the man's house, and perhaps somewhere in the world he has left a message that matches the rose."

"Oh, yes, I did," responded Lucille. "I smiled at her and said: 'I enjoyed myself very much, Mrs. Applegate. I had lots more to eat than I expected to have.'"

Richard Mansfield's humor was often misapprehended for conceit.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas.

The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

WAR DEMAND FOR HORSES.

American Farmers Have an Opportunity to Supply the Demand.

During the next decade there will probably be an increased demand for American horses in the countries now engaged in the European war. The demand may even continue much longer, according to investigators of the United States department of agriculture, as not only will horses be needed for armies, but when peace is restored more will be needed for agriculture. Already European agents are said to be endeavoring to purchase horses in this country and Canada, and there is an increased interest in many sections in horse breeding.

To meet this increased European demand American farmers may well endeavor to raise well bred horses, although the department of agriculture does not advise them to purchase a surplus of horses merely for breeding purposes. It merely advises that ordinary farm work should be done whenever possible by good mares, which should be bred to good stallions. It also desires to emphasize the fact that only horses of high quality may be profitably raised today. Inferior horses are a drag on the market, and their production is to be discouraged as much as the production of good horses should be encouraged.

The United States has previously been drawn on to supply European countries at war. In the Boer war over 10,000 horses were bought here by the British government. It may with the plants three feet apart in the row, will furnish a sufficient supply for an average family. Asparagus requires a deep, rich, fertile, moist and cool soil, a warm exposure, thorough preparation of the land, heavy manuring, thorough tillage in the late autumn and early spring and lastly roots which are from vigorous, healthy stock.

Bear in mind that in setting out an asparagus bed the work is being done for twenty or thirty years and therefore should be very thoroughly done. Use care in selecting the spot where the bed is to be so that there will be no reason for disturbing the plants again when once set. Plow deep, subsoil and turn in a liberal coating of well rotted manure. The plants to give the most satisfactory results should be one-year-old seedlings, and it is well to order them so that they may be on hand by the time the bed is ready. After the plowing is finished there should be a trench at least a foot deep, into which about three inches of good soil and well rotted manure thoroughly mixed should be turned in.

Then set the plants, taking care to spread the roots out well, and cover the crowns with two or three inches of well mixed soil. The first winter, of course, the plants will hardly get more than a good hold, so after the first good frost throw on some light, strawy manure and drag the soil back somewhat from the edge of the trench that the water may not stand in it and when frozen smother the little plants. If one has an old bed the tops should be mowed off and burned and the whole bed be gone over with a spike toothed harrow, with the spikes set slanting; then soon afterward the bed should be covered to the depth of three inches with well rotted manure. If this is unobtainable use old horse manure to which have been added fifty pounds of bonemeal for every hundred foot row of asparagus. The first two seasons no cuttings whatever should be made. It is easy to injure a bed by cutting too soon, so wait for a year or so until the growth is well started and in prime condition for cutting.

A Handy Feed Cutter.

I bought twenty-four calves last summer which I put in my feed lot on Aug. 1. Some of these calves had been on pasture with their mothers, others had been hand fed, and it was quite a problem to get them used to a change of feed. The feed I had for these calves was green corn, Kafir and prairie hay. I soon found there was too much waste in hauling this feed into the lot and allowing them to do their own picking, writes J. K. Welch of Eureka, Kan., in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. I then went to my shop and made the feed cutter illustrated. The body is made of 1 by 12 inch board, four feet long, with sides of 1 by 6 inch pieces. One leg was used at the back end and two in

LITTLE LULU AND THE SNOW FAIRIES

LULU was a very tiny girl even for her six years. She was a good little thing, however, going to school every day and doing her small best to be helpful to mother when she was home.

The little girls were playing together at recess one day when Clara, who was Lulu's dearest friend, whispered to her:

"What's Santa Claus going to bring you, Lulu?" It was almost Christmas time.

Lulu shook her little yellow head and sighed. Mother had said just the day before that times were hard and perhaps Santa wouldn't be able to do as well as usual for some little girls that year. And Lulu was very much afraid when she heard it that mother had meant her little girl. So she answered Clara's question sadly:

"I don't know what Santa will bring me this year. If I don't get the dolly or the set of dishes or the play furniture I want I'm going to try not to mind, for I am just sure Santa would bring them if he could."

Clara had heard talk about the expensiveness of toys, too, and when Lulu explained it to her she wondered if really dear old Santa would be too poor to bring her all she wanted this Christmas.

"Well, I'm going to keep on wishing, just the same," declared Clara. "You know the fairies help Santa, and the fairies can do anything."

Lulu was cheered by this view of the case as she ran along home from school. Every day she kept a sharp lookout for fairies. If ever she met one she meant to beg that fairy to do its little best to help Santa get his

BRONZE WING MOTHER KNEW BEST

ONCE on a time there was a young turkey gobbler named Bronze Wing. He lived with his mother and brothers and sisters in a little house in Farmer Jenks' poultry yard. Their house was very comfortable, and the farmer thought them well, so that the young turkeys were as happy as they could be.

When cold weather came the keys were fed more liberally than usual. The other turkeys who lived in the poultry yard gobbled the food up they began to get very fat.

Old Mother Turkey, who was a wise old fowl, said to Bronze Wing and the rest of her children:

"Be careful, my dears. Don't get too much. Christmas is coming, and every truly wise turkey scratches his back and eats very little."

Bronze Wing ruffled up his feathers and said: "I don't see why, mother. Farmer Jenks seems to like the turkeys the best. He has put all of them into a nice pen by himself and they are getting extra fine food."

"Yes, for awhile," Mother Turkey replied.

"And one of them told me today that Farmer Jenks said that he would take them to the city. The city is fine."

"They will never come back from the city," Mother Turkey answered, shaking her head sadly.

It did seem hard to fast and wait when every one around was feasting, but Mother Turkey kept watch over her brood to see that they did as she told them, for she was a turkey who knew the ways of the human family.

Young Bronze Wing gobbled about in a very disconcerted way. It was small comfort to him that he could, at the holidays, feast as much as he liked.

"Oh, dear! I wish I had a juicy grasshopper," he grumbled one day.

"Come, come! Scratch for work like the rest of us," Mother Turkey urged. "Scratching is fine exercise and will help to keep down your weight."

"I don't care about being thin," naughty Bronze Wing grunted. "I don't see why there are no grasshoppers any more. They were delicious."

"Foolish child! There are no grasshoppers in the winter," Mother Turkey told him.

One morning Bronze Wing noticed that the gate of the poultry yard was open. He glanced around. Mother Turkey and the rest of the flock were busily scratching on the other side of the yard and would not notice him. So he sneaked out, intending to go in a little way on the lookout for grasshoppers.

Presently he came to the woods. It ever possible by good mares, which should be bred to good stallions. It also desires to emphasize the fact that only horses of high quality may be profitably raised today. Inferior horses are a drag on the market, and their production is to be discouraged as much as the production of good horses should be encouraged.

The United States has previously been drawn on to supply European countries at war. In the Boer war over 10,000 horses were bought here by the British government. It may be doubted whether a foreign government could now obtain a similar supply in this country, except at excessive cost. However, if farmers take pains to utilize their good mares during this winter to breed them to good stallions in the course of several years (time enough for the foals to develop) America will be better able to meet the European demand.

Keeping Woodchuck Away.

The woodchuck, or groundhog, is so destructive to gardens in some countries in this section that a few remedial measures may be of interest. White muslin strips may be tied to the pea vine supports about a foot above the ground, at intervals of about a foot in a row, to keep the animal away.

Cotton or oakum may be wrapped around a stone soaked in carbon bisulphide and the mass rolled into the hole as far as possible. In order that the fumes may have the fullest possible effect, close the hole as tightly as possible. A good marksman with a rifle, stationed where he can secure a good view of the infested field, may prove effective. Blasting powder and a long fuse are sometimes used, and so is the steel trap.—F. L. Washburn, Minnesota Station.

SELECTING CORN.

Three elements must be considered in providing foodstuffs—protein, carbohydrates and fat. Protein is the most expensive. It is possible to breed up the protein content in corn, and by so doing, of course, one obtains more protein with no extra cost.

The Illinois experiment station has done important work in breeding corn up to high protein content, and it has been clearly demonstrated that with proper selection this element of food can be put into the corn in greater quantities and without sacrificing anything in yield. The process of selection is so simple that any farmer can carry it out. The seat of the chief protein content of a grain of corn is the kernel. Split a few grains open that have been taken from different ears and observe the size of the kernels. The largest, of course, contain the most protein, and seed from the ears that bear these large kernels should be chosen for planting.—Hoard's Dairyman.

STARTING ASPARAGUS BEDS.

Much Time Is Gained if Work Is Begun in Fall.

Those planning to start an asparagus bed next spring will gain many months if instead of waiting they begin to work now. A row a hundred feet long and prairie hay. I soon found there was too much waste in hauling this feed into the lot and allowing them to do their own picking, writes J. K. Welch of Eureka, Kan., in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. I then went to my shop and made the feed cutter illustrated. The body is made of 1 by 12 inch board, four feet long, with sides of 1 by 6 inch pieces. One leg was used at the back end and two in front, the latter extending eight inches above the frame.

The knife lever was bolted to the top of the left leg to allow the right hand for cutting. The knife was made of a short piece of crosscut saw blade fourteen inches long. This knife cuts square across the end of the box. With this machine one man could cut up enough feed for the twenty-four calves in from three to five minutes. The feed was cut in one-half to one inch lengths and fed in troughs. Kaffir and corn were thoroughly mixed in cutting, and the calves cleaned up the mixture without waste. They had this green feed until frost killed it and did well on it.

Use of Wooden Crates.

About the most handy things on the farm during the time of harvesting potatoes, onions and fruits are the light wooden crates which are made for handling such crops.

Some of these crates are made so that they are collapsible, and fifty or 100 of them can be stored in a small corner when empty or can be stacked in the barn and stored away there for next season when no longer needed.

"FEEDER" CATTLE.

How to select steers that will make good gains and return substantial profits should be well known by the man who plans to market his crops as feed this fall or winter.

John L. Tormey of the University of Wisconsin agricultural experiment station is urging cattle feeders to look for the following characteristics in animals which they intend to finish for the market:

"Steers, if they are to make profitable gains in the feed lot, must have beef characteristics, a wide, strong back and a large heart girth.

"They must have a strong frame and plenty of room for the vital organs, for an animal with a weak constitution cannot hold up through the feeding season.

"A wide head and muzzle, which usually indicate good feeding qualities.

"Short legs, heavy hind quarters and arched ribs are essential in the feeding animal.

"The skin should be reasonably thick, soft and covered by a heavy coat of hair.

"The animal should have a straight back and low set appearance, due to the depth of body and short legs."

Lulu explained it to her she wondered if really dear old Santa would be too poor to bring her all she wanted this Christmas.

"Well, I'm going to keep on wishing, just the same," declared Clara. "You know the fairies help Santa, and the fairies can do anything."

Lulu was cheered by this view of the case as she ran along home from school. Every day she kept a sharp lookout for fairies. If ever she met one she meant to beg that fairy to do its little best to help Santa get his Christmas toys.

On Christmas eve as Lulu got ready to go to bed she noticed that the sky had become quite dark.

"I wonder if we shall have a white Christmas?" Lulu's mother said as she drew the curtains aside.

Lulu was tired and she soon went to sleep. Some time later she opened her eyes. Glancing at the window, she saw something white fluttering and waving just outside the window.

"Whatever can it be?" she wondered and jumped out of bed and ran to the window.

Dancing on the windowpane were several little figures clad in glistening white dresses, just like the snow that lay on the ground. And fluttering through the air Lulu saw many more of these little white creatures, which she knew at once were snow fairies.

The fairies waved their hands, and Lulu put up the window. Strange to say, it did not feel cold, and the little fairies flew in without seeming to be in the least afraid of melting.

"We are Santa Claus' little helpers," one fairy said. "We go about trying to find out just what little girls and boys want for Christmas. We can't come until there is snow, though, for we ride about on the flakes, and the snow has been so late this year. And now, little girl, will you tell us what you want Santa to bring you?"

Lulu did not have to think over that. "My dolly has a crack across her face, and her hair is all gone," she said. "Won't you please tell him to bring me a new dolly?"

"We certainly shall," the fairies smiled, and then they spread their little wings and flew out of the window. Outside they looked like snowflakes.

Lulu crawled back into bed, and presently she went to sleep again. She did not know it was Christmas morning until her mother called her with a gay "Merry Christmas!"

Then she jumped out of bed. "Run right downstairs and see what Santa has left for you," her mother said.

And when Lulu got down to the dining room she shrieked with delight, for Santa had hung up her stocking and filled it with goodies, while in a little chair underneath the stocking was seated a lovely golden haired dolly. Beside it was a little trunk, and when Lulu opened it she found it full of pretty clothes for the new doll.

One morning Bronze Wing noticed that the gate of the poultry yard was open. He glanced around. Mother Turkey and the rest of the flock were busily scratching on the other side the yard and would not notice him. So he sneaked out, intending to go just a little way on the lookout for grasshoppers.

Presently he came to the woods. He had been able to find no insects. The trees were bare, and the wind blew through them, making strange noises. The ground was covered with leaves, and every now and then Bronze Wing would stop to scratch these up to see if he could find a grasshopper lurking under them.

He was stepping along, cocking his head now on this side, now on that, the lookout for grasshoppers when he heard a voice in some bushes say:

"Hello! Wild turkey for Christmas! Then there was a flash of fire and bang. With a squawk of fright Bronze Wing darted off. He half ran, he flew until he was far enough away from the men with the guns to take breath. Then he hurried home as fast as his legs would carry him. He was glad then he was not so fat. He could not have got over the ground so fast if he had been.

It was evening when he neared his house. And what do you think? He passed the kitchen porch where sat the fat turkeys of the pen hanging up bare of feathers and without heads.

"They'll make fine Christmas dinners for some one," Bronze Wing heard the farmer's wife say—yes, the farmer's wife, whom he had trusted so much.

"They ought to be," Farmer Jenk replied, "considering all the extra feed they've had the last few weeks. How they did gobble it down! I wonder if that's the reason turkeys are called gobblers."

Mrs. Jenks smiled. She seemed to think this a joke, but Bronze Wing shuddered. He felt he could never care for his food again.

He crept sadly into the turkey house where his mother was wide awake on her roost waiting for him.

"Wherever have you been?" she demanded.

Bronze Wing told her all about it. "Yes, my dear," she answered, "could have told you all this, but I wished to keep you young and happy as long as I could. Cheer up, though. There will not be another Christmas for a long, long time, and then remember not to be greedy. It was that greediness that got those fat turkeys into trouble, you see."

Bronze Wing hopped up to his perch and tucked his head under his wing. Before he went off to sleep Mother Turkey heard him say, "Christmas is a horrid day for turkeys!"

BRONZE WINGS MOTHER KNEW BEST

ONCE on a time there was a young turkey gobbler named Bronze Wing. He lived with his mother and brothers and sisters in a little house in Farmer Jenks' poultry yard. Their house was very comfortable, and the farmer fed them well, so that the young turkeys were as happy as they could be.

When cold weather came the turkeys were fed more liberally than usual. The other turkeys who lived in the poultry yard gobbled the food until they began to get very fat.

Old Mother Turkey, who was a very wise old fowl, said to Bronze Wing and the rest of her children:

"Be careful, my dears. Don't eat so much. Christmas is coming, when very truly wise turkey scratches hard and eats very little."

Bronze Wing ruffled up his feathers and said: "I don't see why, mother. Farmer Jenks seems to like the fat turkeys the best. He has put all of them into a nice pen by themselves, and they are getting extra fine food."

"Yes, for awhile," Mother Turkey replied.

"And one of them told me today that Farmer Jenks said that he would take them to the city. The city is fine."

"They will never come back from the city," Mother Turkey answered, shaking her head sadly.

It did seem hard to fast and work when every one around was feasting, but Mother Turkey kept watch over her brood to see that they did as she bid them, for she was a turkey of many Christmases, and she knew the ways of the human folk well.

Young Bronze Wing gobbled about in a very disconcerted way. It was small comfort to him that he could, after the holidays were over, feast as much as he liked.

"Oh, dear! I wish I had a nice juicy grasshopper," he grumbled one day.

"Come, come! Scratch for worms like the rest of us," Mother Turkey urged. "Scratching is fine exercise and will help to keep down your weight."

"I don't care about being thin," naughty Bronze Wing grunted. "I don't see why there are no grasshoppers any more. They were delicious."

"Foolish child! There are no grasshoppers in the winter," Mother Turkey told him.

One morning Bronze Wing noticed that the gate of the poultry yard was open. He glanced around. Mother Turkey and the rest of the flock were busily scratching on the other side of the yard and would not notice him. So he sneaked out, intending to go just a little way on the lookout for grasshoppers.

Presently he came to the woods. He

YOUR BIRTHSTONE.

There is an old superstition which asserts that each month has its particular stone, to wear which is lucky for those born in that month.

These are the different stones that are dedicated to the different months, with their respective meanings:

January.—The garnet, symbol of fidelity.

February.—The amethyst, which stands for generosity.

March.—The bloodstone, emblem of faith.

April.—The diamond, which signifies loyalty.

May.—The emerald, the token of health and vigor.

June.—The agate, another symbol of love.

July.—The ruby, the jewel of courage.

August.—The moonstone, a sign of fate.

September.—The sapphire, the stone of truth.

October.—The opal, which means change.

November.—The topaz, token of prosperity.

December.—The turquoise, the jewel of friendship.

The stone of one's birth month is always much in request for engagement rings and gifts.

TURNING ON GAS.

Much Saving May Be Effected by Starting the Flow Gradually.

There are comparatively few women who realize how much gas is wasted when they turn the flow on to its highest point. By experimenting you can ascertain the point at which your burners give the maximum amount of heat and will find out that no matter how much more gas is turned on the flame will remain the same. By turning on the flow of gas carefully until the maximum flame is reached and then never turning it beyond that point a great deal of gas can be saved in the course of a month.

A man who understands the inner workings of gas meters recently explained the most economical way of lighting a gas burner or jet. He said that when the gas is turned on very slowly until the point of lighting is reached no gas is wasted, but that if the gas flow is turned on to its maximum point at once it causes the meter to jump rapidly forward, and as a consequence it will register in the course of a month a good many feet of gas that have really been wasted.

While all the foregoing economies may sound small, yet when taken together at the end of the month they make a very appreciable difference in the amount of the gas bill.

POPULAR NURSERY BIBS.

Jolly Pictures in Bright Colors For Small Boys and Girls.

Mothers know to their sorrow how difficult it is to reconcile children to the wearing of bibs at meal-times. However, most kiddies will be delighted with bibs of the kind pictured here.

This one is intended for wear at the table when the little girl's table man.

NURSERY BIB.

ners are still in the formative stage. It is made of heavy linen, hand embroidered with a delightful nursery story. The border is also embroidered. The story may be stenciled instead of embroidered if more convenient. A bow of washable ribbon ties the bib around the child's neck.

When the Nose Is Red.

If it is due to sunburn, as is often the case, rub the nose once or twice with undiluted lemon juice. This treatment is rather drastic and will very likely cause it to peel, but it will be effective also in making the sunburn disappear. Too often, however, a red nose is the result of indigestion or poor circulation.

If arising from either of these causes you must see to your health. Watch your diet carefully—banish from it all kinds of sweet pastries and rich foods, and eat plenty of fruit and green vegetables. Keep your liver right and you will have won half the battle.

Practice face massage every night, going over the nose with gentle movements to stimulate the circulation of the blood there.

Across the Atlantic.

The narrowest part of the Atlantic is between Brazil and Guinea, where the ocean is only about 1,800 miles wide. From Newfoundland to Ireland, the narrowest breadth north of the equator, is nearly twice as far. From New York to the nearest point of France is nearly three times as far.

The Lesser Evil.

"It's Mr. Boreleigh. I think I'll send him word I'm out."

"Won't the still, small voice reproach you?"

"Oh, yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to Mr. Boreleigh's."—Boston Transcript.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"I can highly recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking 'Fruit-a-tives' for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking 'Fruit-a-tives' after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case."

MRS. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ugly Bronze Wing grunted. "I don't see why there are no grasshoppers any more. They were delicious." "Foolish child! There are no grasshoppers in the winter," Mother Turkey told him.

One morning Bronze Wing noticed that the gate of the poultry yard was open. He glanced around. Mother Turkey and the rest of the flock were busily scratching on the other side of the yard and would not notice him. So he sneaked out, intending to go just a little way on the lookout for grasshoppers.

Presently he came to the woods. He had been able to find no insects. The trees were bare, and the wind blew through them, making strange noises. The ground was covered with leaves, and every now and then Bronze Wing would stop to scratch these up to see if he could find a grasshopper lurking under them.

He was stepping along, cocking his head now on this side, now on that, on the lookout for grasshoppers when he heard a voice in some bushes say:

"Hello! Wild turkey for Christmas!" Then there was a flash of fire and a bang. With a squawk of fright Bronze Wing darted off. He half ran, half flew until he was far enough away from the men with the guns to take breath. Then he hurried home as fast as his legs would carry him. He was glad then he was not so fat. He could not have got over the ground so fast if he had been.

It was evening when he neared the house. And what do you think? As he passed the kitchen porch he saw the fat turkeys of the pen hanging up, bare of feathers and without heads.

"They'll make fine Christmas dinners for some one," Bronze Wing heard the farmer's wife say—yes, the farmer's wife, whom he had trusted so much.

"They ought to be," Farmer Jenks replied, "considering all the extra feed they've had the last few weeks. How they did gobble it down! I wonder if that's the reason turkeys are called gobblers."

Mrs. Jenks smiled. She seemed to think this a joke, but Bronze Wing shuddered. He felt he could never care for his food again.

He crept sadly into the turkey house, where his mother was wide awake on her roost waiting for him.

"Wherever have you been?" she demanded.

Bronze Wing told her all about it. "Yes, my dear," she answered, "I could have told you all this, but I wished to keep you young and happy as long as I could. Cheer up, though. There will not be another Christmas for a long, long time, and then remember not to be greedy. It was their greediness that got those fat turkeys into trouble, you see."

Bronze Wing hopped up to his perch and tucked his head under his wing. Before he went off to sleep Mother Turkey heard him say, "Christmas is a horrid day for turkeys!"

Why do statesmen read the Weekly Sun of Toronto? Because it is a paper with a reputation that is unquestioned. It is the farmers' business paper, and is watching farmers' interests all the time. Aside, even from its market reports which are acknowledged to be the best in the Dominion, it is a paper of weight. You should have it come to your home every week. All through the long winter nights it will furnish a wealth of interesting reading material of a thoroughly reliable character. This paper has special clubbing arrangements with the Sun. Let us have your renewal and add the Sun to your list of papers for 1915.

"Toik's Soliloquy" is a fascinating tale of a brindle bull terrier who saved his master from financial ruin by his ability to fight, and who later straightened out the crooked course of true love. "The Bird Dog" will appeal to all those interested in this "embodiment of canine intelligence." Other articles there are of outdoor life from Atlantic to Pacific and departments full of interest to the sportsman, hunter and fisherman.

The Historical Lecture.

Dr. W. Pakenham, Dean of the Faculty of Education in the University of Toronto, was the lecturer at the regular November meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society last Friday evening. His subject "Early schools and schoolmasters" was one which attracted a large audience and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the evening. The story of the school of Upper Canada for the period previous to the Act of Union in 1841 has been most interestingly told in magazines and books, but with the possible exception of the short address from Mr. Frederick Burrows, this is the first time a Napanee audience has had the privilege of hearing a good lecture on the subject. For those who can remember the pioneer days in education—and there were several of this class present on Friday evening—the lecture brought to mind a vivid story of personal experiences; and for the younger members of the audience Dr. Pakenham has done a great favor by impressing on their minds the crude, serious, difficult and picturesque sides of early education in our land. His lantern views given after the lecture illustrated the subject in a most appropriate manner. At the conclusion of the lecture the President of the Society expressed the thanks of the Napanee people to Dr. Pakenham for his kindness in coming here and delivering a lecture. The next meeting of the Society was announced for Friday evening, December 11th, when Prof. J. L. Morrison of Queen's University, Kingston, will deliver a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, on "Wellington and Waterloo Campaign." The meeting closed with, "God Save the King."

A Christmas Suggestion.

A most sensible and seasonable Christmas present is a year's membership to the Public Library. Many new books dealing with the countries at war have been added and the magazines for next year promise to be the best for years. Presentation certificates of membership may be obtained from the Librarian.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Jas. Fitzpatrick spent last week with friends in Toronto.

Miss Maria Grange returned this week from Toronto.

Mr. Robt. O'Neill, New Rockford,
Dakota, is visiting his brother, Mr.
John O'Neill, Napanee.

Mr. Ed. Francisco spent a couple of days in Toronto last week.

Mrs. Cronk. Guelph, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meagher.

Mrs. J. H. S. Derry, and children spent the week end with her mother in Kingston.

Mrs. Mina Edwards, Wilkesbarrie,
Pa., is spending the winter with her sister, Miss S. Allen, West street.

Mr. Robert Brown, Sudbury, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. R. S.
Wales.

Mr. Grant Dickinson, Toronto, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R.
J. Dickinson.

Miss M. Grange leaves to-day to visit her sister, Mrs. H. M. Robertson, Kingston.

Mr. Jas. Foster was in Toronto a couple of days this week on business connected with his proposed new opera house and his moving picture show.
Mr. Foster expects in the near future to commence production of a series of feature films for his Wonderland.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Vine, Bridge street, entertained the members of the fire brigade to a light luncheon at their home on Tuesday evening. This was a repetition of a similar event about this time last year and was very much enjoyed by the boys of the brigade. Very dainty refreshments were served, and a pleasant hour spent. Instrumental music and short speeches helped to make the gathering a most pleasant one.

Hamblly will ship hogs on Tuesday, December 8th 1914. All hogs must be delivered before 1 o'clock.

Re Union.

Will be held in the schoolroom of St. Mary Magdalene's church, under the auspices of Ladies' Guild on Tuesday, Dec. 8th. Refreshments served and a splendid programme. Silver collection. This will be the last reunion before Mr and Mrs. Kidd leave Napanee and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to be present.
There will be a few aprons on sale.

Municipal Politics.

On December 15th the municipal council by the natural processes of law practically goes out of existence.
Speculation is rife as to the composition of the 1915 council. Some of the present members of the council evidently think that their long service at the council board in the interest of the town entitles them to look for something higher. Coun. R. J. Dickinson has announced himself as a candidate for the office of Chief Magistrate of the town, and the present holder of that office, Mayor Alfred Alexander, is of the opinion that, as is customary he is entitled to a second term, and if the people want him he would again seek re-election. Coun. W. T. Waller has announced himself as a candidate for the Reeveship, against all comers.
The present Reeve, Mr. S. C. Denison, says it will all depend on circumstances whether he will seek re-election for this office. Coun. Carson says he is going to be in the fight, but the point of attack seems to be somewhat obscure. He also may be looking for an advance up the ladder of municipal honors. Coun. Wiseman is rather in love with the idea of being able to keep his seat at the council board warm for another year. Councillors
Geo. T. Walters and M. P. Graham may and they may not seek re-election.
The field of candidates may be a determining factor, as to whether they will or will not again seek municipal honors. So far as we can learn there is no new material offering to fill the breach in the ranks of the council by the intentions of the gentlemen above referred to.
